THOMAS EVASIVE ON SUGAR

NEW YORK, July 18.—Washington B. Thomas, formerly of Boston, president of the Sugar Trust, called as a witness before the congressional investigating committee in this city today displayed a significant loss of memory when questioned regarding the charges that the trust secretly gained control of the National Sugar Refining Company and then filed a suit in chancery in New Jersey, which was aimed to crush out the holders of common stock and make their holdings worthless.

That the American Sugar Refining Company, the trust, did get the majority holdings of the National was admitted by Mr. Thomas after many evasions and declarations that he could not remember.

Chairman Hardwick asked if the trust had not started the suit through the National and if it was not responsible for it. The question hung on whether the American had given the services of its lawyers to the National. This was bitterly fought by counsel for the trust and Mr. Thomas refused to answer it.

"Stock Will Be No Good."

"I am trying to find out," declared Mr. Hardwick, "whether the American instituted this suit through the National. If the National wins this suit, common stock of the National will be no good and the American will gobble it up."

Mr. Thomas, on advice of counsel, refused to enlighten the committee. His father, in 1887, when the trust was first forming, sold his Boston refinery to the Havemeyer interests for $1,500,000.

Thomas testified that when the American Sugar Refining Company was incorporated in 1891, its stock was worth $50,000,000. In 1892, when it absorbed four Philadelphia plants, the stock was raised to $75,000,000 and later to $90,000,000.

"I have no personal knowledge of the affairs of the company prior to 1892," said the witness. "I wish to say that anything I might give in testimony should not reflect on Mr. Havemeyer. He ran his business in a most peculiar manner, like the captain of the ship. He was the sole master. I believe that if he was living now he would run it in a different way and take advice of his associates."

"Did not the American cause the E. C. Knight Refining Company in Philadelphia to transfer its property to the Franklin Refining Company?" he was asked.

"I don't know exactly," was the reply.

"Did not the American compel four Philadelphia companies to consolidate into one?"

"I don't know exactly."

"I Have No Recollection."

"In 1891 how many refineries were there in Baltimore?"

"Five."

"Did not the American company close them and throw many people out of work?"

"I have no recollection of that. The American company bought an interest in the Consolidated company of Baltimore and got control, I think, but I am not positive."

"What then happened?"

"The plant was found in a bad condition and it was rebuilt and then dismantled."

LAWRENCE IS BROKE; ASKS HELP

The city of Lawrence today confessed that she was absolutely broke and asked the State to help her out.

This remarkable proceeding was made known when a Lawrence banker called on Governor Foss and requested him to seek financial help for Lawrence from the Legislature.

Lawrence wants $500,000. She knows no way of getting it unless Massachusetts, through the Legislature, will advance the money. That is what the Lawrence banker asked the Governor to request the Legislature to do.

This request came as a result of the fact that the treasury in Lawrence is bankrupt—that it has not even the proverbial shoestring, and that city employes must be discharged, public work be held up and, in fact, the whole business of the city practically suspended until they get some money.

So they asked the State to please lend them half a million.

To-day 125 men out of the 160 on the payroll of the street department were laid off by Patrick Lyons, superintendent of streets, by order of Mayor Cahill.

The Mayor's order for rigid economy in the street department and for a complete inventory of department supplies now on hand came in the following letter:

The Mayor's Order.

City of Lawrence.
Office of the Mayor.
Lawrence, Mass., July 13, 1911.

Mr. Patrick Lyons,
Supt of Streets:

Sir—The appropriation for your department is nearly exhausted. Like almost all appropriations it was inadequate to meet requirements of the department. You must stop at once all work except that done by the regular employes of the department. You must do all necessary teaming with city teams. There are outstanding bills due your department, which, if collected, may permit necessary work to go on during the summer months, thereby keeping the men employed until the City Council meets in September. I do not want to see laboring men deprived of work and wages and you must follow my instructions to the letter or your department must soon shut down. You will at once make a true and complete inventory of all supplies on hand and as materials for sewers, condways, sidewalks etc. Do not make any purchases, because I shall hold up all such bills. Begin at once on the inventory and forward me a copy when it is completed. Tolerate no delay in this matter. I appreciate the fact that when you took office the street department had much necessary work ahead to be done. I know that you have been confronted with many difficulties. I stand ready to do all in my power to help you finish the year without being obliged to turn men out of work, if you will take my advice and practice the most rigid economy.

Very truly yours,
JOHN T. CAHILL,
Mayor.

PEARY'S DOG BITES THE DAUGHTER OF TUFTS PROFESSOR

SOUTH HARPSWELL, Me., July 18.—Rescued with difficulty by the keeper in charge of Rear Admiral Robert Peary's dogs at Eagle Island to-day, Margaret Neal, the ten-year-old daughter of Professor Herbert V. Neal of Tufts College, was horribly bitten by Old King, the leader of the pack. The child was wading when the dog sprang upon her and the rest of the animals gathered about her and fought to get at her. She will recover.

QUERY DEATH OF 4 BABIES

FALL RIVER, July 18.—Following an inquest held on the body of Francelina Sousa, five months old child of Antone Sousa, who died last Saturday, the stomach of the infant has been sent to Professor Whitney of Harvard for analysis of its contents.

Francelina is the fourth child of Sousa to die since March 22. The other deaths were Belmina, eight years, March 22; Leocadina S., four years, March 24, and Gilberta, two years, July 6.

Dr. T. P. Cristo, who attended the first two, gave causes of death as bronchial pneumonia in each case. Dr. LeBoeuf, who attended the third child, gave cholera infantum as the cause of death. This was also assigned as the cause of the infant's death, the fourth child.

The inquest on Francelina was held by Medical Examiner Thomas Gunning, the well-known baseball player of a few years ago, who is now one of the best known physicians of the country. Doctors Lewis, McCarthy and Keaney were present.

Each child was insured for $100 in a philanthropic burial society.

DIES AS SHE WINS FORTUNE

Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan, daughter of the late Ole Bull, the famous violinist, and whose contest of her mother's will in Maine within the past few months attracted the attention of the whole country, died early to-day at West Lebanon, Me., at the home of Mrs. Abbie C. Shapleigh, an old friend of the Bull family.

A pathetic and tragic feature of the woman's death was that it occurred on the day on which the whole legal controversy over the will, which left an estate of nearly $500,000, was to be settled in favor of Mrs. Vaughan.

The stipulation of the attorneys upon which the will case was settled was presented to Judge Hobbs at 11 o'clock today and he agreed to it at once. A petition was filed asking that Lawyer Ralph S. Bartlett be appointed special administrator of the estate of Mrs. Vaughan and Judge Hobbs made the appointment.

Following the court proceedings Mr. Bartlett went to West Lebanon from Biddeford to make arrangements for the funeral of Mrs. Vaughan.

The lawyers were gathered in the probate court at Biddeford to-day ready to affix their signatures to the settlement and they really expected Mrs. Vaughan to be able to be present when they learned the startling news that she died in the night.

"Broken Heart," Says Lawyer.

"She died of a broken heart," said Lawyer Ralph S. Bartlett, who, with Sheriff John L. Whipple, represented Mrs. Vaughan during the will fight. "She had a tubercular affection, but the trouble over her mother's will, the settlement, the notoriety —all this broke her heart."

Mr. Bartlett said that the settlement papers would be signed and the controversy ended. Mrs. Vaughan had disposed of her property in a will lately completed. She was about forty years of age and she and her husband had been divorced only a short time.

They had one child, a little girl, who was mentioned frequently at the startling will hearings, because of the fact that Mrs. Ole Bull had gone to India in pursuit of the strange Vedanta philosophy when her little granddaughter was taken ill and died.

Mrs. Vaughan contested her mother's will chiefly because she believed that the weird religion of the Vedanta faith had taken such a hold on her mother that it unbalanced her mind and while in that condition she had been led to make large bequests to followers of the Indian faith.

Mrs. Shapleigh, at whose home Mrs. Vaughan died, had lived with the Bulls and her beautiful home was presented to her by Ole Bull. Mrs. Bull Vaughan Bull was like a daughter to her, and when she became ill at her home in Cambridge and lawyers summoned from her husband it was natural for her to turn to her old friend.

Never Appeared in Court.

Not once during the long, sensational will fight was Mrs. Vaughan able to appear

ALL OFFICIALS EXONERATED

The Middlesex county grand jury which has been investigating since the first week in January charges against the officials of the Middlesex county known as the "County Ring" reported at 1:15 p. m. to-day to Judge Stevens of the Superior Court at East Cambridge. They completed by exonerate the officials. The grand jury has been sitting on the case twenty-three weeks, has heard 101 witnesses, and taken nearly 2,000 pages of testimony. Every department was investigated. The jury also handed in a resolution of a supplementary nature in which its members speak in glowing terms of the power and worth of John J. Higgins as District Attorney. They say that Higgins is "able, conscientious and fearless."

GLOUCESTER DORIES SEIZED

ST JOHNS, N. F., July 18.—Surprised while in the act of taking bait illegally near Cape Race, at the southeastern extremity of Newfoundland, sixteen Gloucester fishermen comprising the crew of the Gloucester fishing schooner Arethusa hastily rowed to shore, abandoned their dories and fled into the woods.

Seven abandoned dories were confiscated by the colonial cruiser Fiona, which surprised the fishermen at their alleged illegal work.

In order to catch the fishermen themselves, a posse of police has been dispatched to the scene, and to-day a thorough search was being made for the fishermen.

The Arethusa is known to be hovering off the coast, out of range of the cruiser, and is supposed to be manned at the present time by only the grandpa and the cook. The Fiona is keeping a sharp lookout for the Gloucester vessel, with a twofold purpose in view—her capture and the arrest of her crew should they attempt to rejoin their craft.

MARK TWAIN LEFT $607,906 ESTATE

BETHEL, Ct., July 18.—The final account of the executors of the estate of Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) has been allowed in the Probate Court. The estate totals $to $607,906, but with deductions leaves a balance of $507,706 on hand. The inheritance tax due the State of Connecticut was $5,167.

M'ALEER IS AFTER RED SOX

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18.—The Washington Star to-day says in regard to the sale of the Boston club:

"Jim McAleer is behind the movement to buy the Boston American League club. It is the Washington manager who opened negotiations with John I. Taylor, and is believed here to have an option on the Boston club at this very time, with every prospect of becoming its purchaser.

"McAleer's absence from the team, when he was expected to be scouting, was not entirely lost in that way. In fact, it is known that McAleer was working on John I. Taylor at that time and was arranging the details of the purchase of the club.

"Only a few weeks ago McAleer jumped to Boston one night, ostensibly to make a trade for Wagner and Cicotte, when, in fact, his real object was to learn how Taylor stood if made a proposition to sell his club.

"McAleer's recent scouting trip had a peculiar look, for the reason that there was not a single ball team on the map large enough for him to have been there, and a man so well known in baseball as McAleer could hardly go into any ball town without being recognized.

"McAleer has frequently expressed himself as not wanting to manage a ball club, but anxious to own one. It is not unlikely confidence to say that during the Nationals rest Western trip he opened negotiations for the purchase of the Browns. This was well under way and the deal would have probably been consummated when the St. Louis Cardinals made their great spurt, and McAleer, realizing that with the opposition club in the pennant race the tail-end Browns would not be a financial success for some years to come, called the deal off.

Financial Success Sure.

But the prospects of getting hold of the Boston club are quite alluring. There is no question about the financial success of such a venture, for that club has made several fortunes since it was installed at the Hub, and that without the team winning the pennant every year.

"McAleer has some money of his own—not enough, of course, to buy out John I. Taylor, but he has splendid backing. He was told last winter at the New York meeting to go ahead and buy the St. Louis club, and could have paid spot cash for it, but Hedges' price was too high. This same backing is behind McAleer in the Boston deal, which has all the earmarks of going through.

"Since McAleer reached Chicago he has been in conference with President Ban Johnson, and it is understood that he is interested with him in the purchase of the Boston club, and it is understood from a reliable source that the deal may be closed within ten days or less.

"Should McAleer succeed in this venture he would undoubtedly immediately resign the management of the local team. As said before, McAleer has frequently expressed himself as being anxious to own a ball club, not to manage one. It is not his intention to have anything to do with the playing end of the club he expects to own, but will turn the team over to a manager and look after the business end himself."

Though McAleer has a two-year contract with the local club there is no doing that he would be allowed to cancel this, for the Washington club owners would not be apt to stand in the way of a man bettering his condition.

OFFICIAL MILK INQUIRY BEGUN

District Attorney Pelletier began an investigation of the advance of the price of milk from eight to nine cents to-day, in pursuance of an order adopted yesterday by the City Council asking him to do so.

The order was introduced by Councilman Curley, who urged that the district attorney ascertain whether the milk distributors were trying to wring from the public additional tribute.

Complaints from all over the city have reached the AMERICAN about the unexpected jump in the prices. Patrons of most of the companies have been notified that milk by the quart will be nine cents and by the pint will be five cents.

As many of the poor people buy their milk by the pint, the advance will fall more heavily upon them than upon those who buy in larger quantities.

Graustein Won't Increase.

On top of this advance by certain dealers come the statement, made to an AMERICAN reporter to-day by W. A. Graustein of the Boston Dairy Company, one of the largest distributors of milk in New England, that his company does not intend to raise the price.

Mr. Graustein, who ought to know what he is talking about, says also that there is plenty of milk and that there is no reason why the price should be raised.

The Elm Farm Milk Company, which was recently fined $5,000 in the Federal Court for accepting rebates from the New Haven Railroad, gave the following notice which contains their reason for boosting the price:

Beginning July 16, owing to the advance in price which we are making to our milk producers, we are obliged to advance the price of milk to our customers to 9 cents a quart. The price of 5 cents a pint will stand as at present.

ELM FARM MILK CO.

Protest by Customer.

A customer of the Elm Farm Milk Company, who lives on Harvard street, Dorchester, commented on this notice in a letter to this newspaper as follows:

Editor AMERICAN:

I enclose a slip left at all customers' doors Sunday, July 16. I presume the increased cost per cow to the "producers" is on a par with the beef packers increasing the cost of beef 1-16 cent a pound and the dealers making it a full cent to the public. Others have not, as yet, made any difference in price, but I have no doubt that they will "find it necessary." As Jeff would say, "FINE."

Soldiers Returning From Forts

Coast artillerymen, after tour of duty at harbor forts, came to Boston to-day and marched through the business district to their armory. They won much applause by their fine appearance and marching.

Under command of Colonel Walter E. Lombard, 900 members of the Coast Artillery Corps, who have been engaged in mimic warfare at the forts in the harbor, returned to Boston to-day.

The soldiers first disembarked from the steamer Myles Standish at Rowe's Wharf. Marching formation was quickly arranged. The troops marched up High street to Congress to State, to Washington, to School, to Tremont, thence to the armory.

The soldiers for the past week have been engaged in learning points of war at Forts Andrew, Standish, Warren and Strong. They were greeted at the wharf by hundreds of friends. Windows of office buildings along the route were crowded. The marchers were greeted again and again by cheers.

AGAIN BLOCKING GRAND TRUNK

Because there is no court order restraining the New Haven road from building freight houses on the plot of land in Woonsocket, on the Massachusetts side of the line, work is being rushed by the New Haven's contractors in this new move to block the Grand Trunk in its efforts to get into Providence.

The Grand Trunk presented a petition to the Superior Court in Rhode Island which declared that the sole purpose of the freight houses was to block the Grand Trunk. Mayor Mullen of Woonsocket issued a permanent order forbidding the New Haven building any building of any kind on the Rhode Island side.

But the Massachusetts side was free from court injunction or official edict, so President Mellen's help was rushed to the Massachusetts side of the line, and here they are working to-day for fear injunction may stop this work at any time.

About a third of the tract of land the New Haven bought up after the Grand Trunk had staked it out for its own uses lies in Massachusetts. Freight houses are being erected on this portion for the convenience of Woonsocket citizens, it is said. The latter have begun a protest and it was declared by prominent business men to-day that they will fight the construction by the New Haven of freight sheds which in reality lie in the township of Blackstone, across the Massachusetts line. Merchants of Woonsocket say the New Haven purpose is apparent and that it does not wish so much to accommodate Woonsocket as it does to block the Grand Trunk.

Gangs of workmen to-day began laying tracks and installing switches on the Massachusetts end. Mayor Mullen in a statement to-day made it plain that he will stand for no attempts on the part of the New Haven to build on his side of the line.

In the Superior Court at Providence next Friday there will be a hearing on the Grand Trunk's bill to equity seeking to issue an injunction to restrain the New Haven from building any freight sheds on the disputed plot of land. The Grand Trunk also petitions the court to subsidize the land necessary to the Grand Trunk and not necessary to the New Haven.

In its bill the Grand Trunk makes the pointed charge that the "New Haven road bought the tract of land under consideration after the Southern New England's engineers had staked it out as part of their layout."

BULL HEIRESS DIES SUDDENLY

to court. Doctors and nurses, supervised by Mrs. Shapleigh, whom Mrs. Vaughan called "Aunt," were trying to build up her health. But it appeared the sick woman could not summon the spirit to rally.

Feared Death Was Near.

Mrs. Vaughan had been told that she would be wanted at Biddeford to-day in connection with the settlement of the will suit.

"Oh," she said to Mrs. Shapleigh on Sunday, "I dread the strain of going to court. I don't think I can stand it."

Mrs. Shapleigh tried to comfort the woman. But Mrs. Vaughan had already missed given up the fight for life.

"I don't believe that I'll live until Tuesday, Aunt Abbie," she said.

"Oh, yes you will, dear," replied Mrs. Shapleigh. "All the trouble is past now and we'll have such a good time here this Summer."

But from that time Mrs. Vaughan began to sink. Good nursing and expert treatment did what they could, but the woman's physical strength had gone and her nominal power had begun to wane. It was the beginning of the swift end. When the end came there were with Mrs. Vaughan Mrs. Shapleigh and her two children, Amelia and William.

Mrs. Vaughan died on the same day of the month as her mother Mrs. Otis Bull died on January 18 last. Her daughter died on her just six months.

In the settlement to-day Mrs. Shapleigh was made the principal heir with $500,000. Thorp, a brother of Mrs. Bull, left an executor. His legacy under the will was not touched.

Trial Watched by Country.

The trial of Mrs. Vaughan's contest of the will of her mother, Mrs. Otis Bull, which is now in progress in Biddeford, has attracted attention all over the country, not only because of the prominence of the persons involved, but also because of the remarkable side-lights that were thrown on the practice of Oriental mysticism by the stories of several witnesses.

Mrs. Bull prior to her death in Cambridge, lived in Eliot, Me., and owing to this fact the proceedings were brought in the Probate Court of Alfred County in that State. The value of her estate was nearly $500,000. Mrs. Vaughan was left but a small sum in the will and soon decided to contest the instrument. The proceedings just closed began in March of this year.

Testimony to show that Mrs. Bull's mind had been affected by mystic observances and the strange practices of Raja Yoga was early introduced. Exercises introduced in by Mrs. Bull in the belief they enabled her to control her body and mind were related on the stand and by deposition.

Many of these strange exercises took place at Mrs. Bull's home, at No. 160 Brattle street, Cambridge, known as "The Studio House." Mrs. Bull and her friends were accustomed to sit for hours boxing incense and "communing with the dead." It was known. Many of the companions of Mrs. Bull in her last years were heard during the will hearing and some of them declared the strange rites indulged in were particularly taxing to their strength and nerves. One of the members of her cult declared he gave up the mysterious practical physical work.

There were breathing exercises to teach the power of concentration and by breathing first through one nostril and then through the other control of the body by the mind was sought. Peculiar medicines administered to Mrs. Bull in her last illness were also described. Some of them left her weak and with great lines on her face.

The strange fancies of Mrs. Bull and her self-styled guides required, it was testified persons, she believed, exerted a malign influence when they entered her home. So she resorted to unusual methods to rid her home of the effects. Chairs were rubbed in oil and weird incantations were had to dispel the evil spirits.

CHICAGO CUTS PRICE OF GAS

CHICAGO, July 18.—As the result of a fight waged for years, the Chicago City Council, early to-day, unanimously passed an ordinance reducing the price of gas from 85 cents to a rate that will average 70 1-3 cents during the five years. In fulfilling its promise to the people, when they elected Carter Harrison Mayor last Spring the Democratic party restricts the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company to a

NEW YORK WOMEN WILL "FAST" TO AID SUFFRAGIST CAUSE

NEW YORK, July 18. — To aid the women of California, who hope to win the vote when the issue of suffrage for women is presented to the people there, on October 10, New York women suffragists will observe a week's fast next month. During the seven days beginning August 15, the women are expected to forego many pleasures, including ice cream, rooting drinks, roof garden parties and week-end visits.

A long list of well-known women have subscribed to the plan. The money saved will be turned over to the California cause.

SALEM ROUTE FOR NEW ROAD

Chief Engineer John H. Bickford of the Boston & Eastern Railroad, in accordance with the law in regard to obtaining locations, has filed in the office of the City Clerk of Salem, plans showing the route of the proposed Boston to Beverly electric road through Salem.

It is improbable that any action will be taken on the plans till the meeting of the Board of Aldermen in September. In order to put the road through it will be necessary to demolish sixty seven buildings, the majority of which are dwelling houses, and cause about half a mile under the hill in Mackerel Park, from Mason street to Grover street. The new road wishes to cross the steam railroad tracks at Sterry street.

RACE GAMBLERS ROUTED BY BASS

DOVER, N. H., July 18.—Governor Bass won an easy victory over the race track gamblers to-day when Manager Page of the Granite Park track announced that there will be no pool selling during the race meeting which began here this afternoon.

As was exclusively announced in the AMERICAN, Governor Bass when he heard of the attempt to revive race track betting in the State sent the following telegram to Attorney General Eastman.

I desire that the laws relating to pool selling be enforced at the Dover race meeting this week. Please take such action as is necessary.

E. F. BASS, Governor.

The Attorney-General at once telephoned to County Solicitor George T. Hughes here and he notified Manager Page to-day. Everything was in readiness at the track to start pool selling when the gates opened, but the list went down with a bang, and

REFUSED $1 FOR KISS, TRIPPED UP, HAS MAN ARRESTED

WORCESTER, July 18.—Because Narsis Marsigian, aged 68, offered her $1 for a kiss and then tripped her up when she refused to sell, Miss Florence Beauvais, a clerk in a Front street store, had the aged man before Judge Utley in the district court and Judge Utley imposed a fine of $15.

Miss Beauvais, who is 22, told the court that she had been annoyed repeatedly by Marsigian offering her money for kisses in the presence of other people.

Judge Utley made an inquiry as to the mental status of Marsigian and then imposed the fine the disgusted pool sellers packed up and, as they said, "beat it." Manager Page says the week's racing will go on as nearly as planned, but without betting.

HARBOR BILL GOES THROUGH

The $9,000,000 bill for the improvement of Boston harbor was ordered to a third reading in the House to-day by an overwhelming voice vote. Several amendments to the measure were defeated and the bill late to-day was passed.

It was the first debatable reading the bill has had in the House. It has passed the Senate unanimously.

Representative Crane of Cambridge offered an amendment providing for the appointment by the Governor of a secretary to the Dock Commission which the measure creates who would get a salary of $2,500 a year. This amendment was defeated.

Representative Reed of Winchester moved to substitute for the measure the Hon. Moses Bonaparte bill which provides for a port director and the building of a city pier on Commonwealth flats instead. This amendment was defeated.

"That was a great dinner we had last night!" "It was," said Forbes. "Nothing but the Venetian Room at the American House for me after that," said Brown.

Wednesday, July 19th, Will Be Blue Ribbon Day at Gilchrist's

"Blue Ribbon Day" Prices must be lower than the lowest prices quoted elsewhere

The above "Blue Ribbon Day" rule is put to its severest test in the month of July, for in this month every modern merchandising establishment lowers the prices of its remaining merchandise to the very lowest notch. Yet in the very face of this fact

We offer you Wednesday the newest and most seasonable merchandise at lower prices than other stores are asking as clearance prices for left-overs.

This wonderful list of "Blue Ribbon Day" values will bring great buying throngs to Gilchrist's Wednesday, regardless of weather conditions.

Josephine Joy In Her Latest Pose

Private detectives are now in Boston seeking information about Conners' fair curly cutest here of young and beautiful actress who said she made over Boston "roll coin" pay $25,000 for his flirtation with her.

Sleuths from a New York detective agency in Boston, looking up the musical career in this city of Mrs. Abner V. Sturtevant, formerly a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, and later known on the stage as Josephine Joy and Josephine Gibbons.

Mrs. Sturtevant, who is young and beautiful, declared that a prominent Boston broker paid her $25,000 to keep quiet about their acquaintance, and charged that she lied to make them old cover pay for their flirtations.

The name of the Boston man is known, and while he was formerly a prominent broker, he is now retired. It was said that the detectives had had an interview with him.

The detectives were also looking for another man who, Mrs. Sturtevant said, had threatened to divulge certain things about her career in Boston unless she paid him a sum of money.

Mrs. Sturtevant who was also known on the stage as Josephine Gibbons is still very distinctly remembered in the corridors of the New England Conservatory of Music. She used to live in Gardner Hall, one of the dormitories over in Hemenway street.

200 FIGHTING FOREST FIRES

BRIDGEWATER, July 18.—More than 200 men are busily engaged to-day in fighting the forest fire which started on the outskirts of the town last Tuesday, and up to the present time have succeeded in getting it under control. The rain of yesterday helped the men materially in subduing the flames. At least 400 acres of valuable timber land has been destroyed.

N. Y. CHOLERA SCARE ABATED

WASHINGTON, July 18.—"The cholera situation is well in hand," declared Surgeon General Wyman of the Public Health and Marine Hospital service to-day. "While the situation is grave, there is no need for alarm on the part of the public. Every port of entry is guarded and the utmost precautions are being taken. All Atlantic coast cities are under rigid inspection."

BRITISH AD MEN HERE IN AUGUST

The largest advertising interests in Great Britain will be represented at the Advertising Convention, to be held during August 1, 2, 3 and 4, in which the advertising men in the United States and Canada take part. The Londoners say they expect to obtain a great many valuable suggestions for the improvement of business in their country, and they in turn will give the travelers many valuable hints on the benefits of their trade experiences. Never before have London merchants and great advertising concerns sent their men here to study American advertising ideas in connection with the American "ad" men.

The widespread interest in this great American assembly of advertising men is shown by the fact that in the London party will be delegates chosen by the following leading advertising organizations of Great Britain: The Incorporated Society of Advertising, the Association of Advertising Managers, the Society of Advertisement Consultants, the London Newspaper Proprietors' Association, the Northern Newspaper Owners, the Irish Newspaper Society, the Northern Newspaper Owners, the United Billposters' Association and various advertising clubs in London.

Meet Visitors in New York.

Major P. F. O'Keefe, chairman of the reception committee of the Pilgrim Publicity Association, and other members of the committee will meet the visitors on the pier when they land in New York and will bring them direct to Boston as guests of honor of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, throughout the convention.

The substantial character of the London delegation is seen in the following list of delegates.

A. E. Owen, advertising manager of Lever Bread, a product of Messrs. Spillers & Bakers, Ltd. of Cardiff. So. Wales, one of the largest and most important firms of millers in Great Britain.

A. W. Gamage, principal proprietor of a very large department store chiefly devoted to sporting and fancy goods.

J. C. Akerman, representative of the Advertising World, one of the most progressive advertising trade journals in London.

Pearson Manager Coming.

A. W. Rider, manager of the London Daily Express, second half-penny daily morning newspaper started in England, he paper is principally owned by C. Arthur Pearson.

Louis Kaufman, advertising manager of Truth, a weekly paper, the policy of which is general criticism and the exposure of shams of all sorts.

Reginald Harris, connected with the London Daily Standard and interested in advertising and newspapers in general.

Lionel D. Falk, representing Messrs. Keymer & Co., newspaper advertising agents, who specialize in the placing of England and Colonial advertising. Falk is also interested in the Colonial work.

J. A. Mudie, the London advertising representative of the Dundee Courier, one of the most important newspapers in Scotland.

Hudson Hadley, a prominent member of the Society of Advertising Consultants, director of the firm of Hadley & Hadley, specialists in the placing of advertising agent, except that of patent medicines and the religious papers. They put up schemes and general lines of advertising on the basis of a fee agreed upon beforehand.

Northcliffe Represented.

J. Stroud, managing director of Messrs. C. Mitchell & Co., Ltd., one of the largest of advertising agents in Great Britain. It was through this firm that Warner's Safe Cure and many of the most widely known patent medicines were exploited in Great Britain.

C. E. Stembridge, general manager of the head office of the Northcliffe Daily Telegraph, one of the most important daily newspapers outside of London.

H. Burt, representing the Associated Newspapers, Limited, the organization that makes Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa and other products of Lord Northcliffe.

F. W. Boyer, director of Messrs. Fulford Ltd., London. This firm is the owner and exploiter of a number of patent medicines which have had an enormous sale. The original Fulford pills firm was a purchase of Senator Fulford of Williams's Pink Pills fame. Mr. Boyer is a son-in-law of Mr. Boyer.

R. Powell Rees, chairman and managing director of the R. Powell Rees, Ltd. service advertising agency, controlling a number of high class periodicals as honorary secretary of the Sphinx Club, Mr. Rees is the chief organizer of the London delegation.

In addition to those named above, the editors will hold their meetings, which have been officially delegated by any organization, but who are coming as representatives of special interest in the convention. They are F. B. Smith, manager of the Advertising Agent; J. Proctor Humphries, representing Messrs. Spottiswoode, printers of high class service advertising agents, of which firm he is managing director, and Percy B. Stephens, British representative of Hugh MacLean, publishers of Montreal and Toronto.

GUGGENHEIM SQUEEZE FOR INDEPENDENTS

WASHINGTON, July 18.—That independent steamship lines are at the mercy of the Guggenheim railroads and steamship lines was shown before the House committee investigating the Controversy between the Mallory line by the Guggenheim interests. Mr. Brayton said that up to two years ago the Humboldt Company, which is an independent concern, had had no trouble whatever with the White Pass & Yukon Railroad Company and with the Pacific & Alaska Steamship Company. These companies refused to renew the agreement, and when the Interstate Commerce Commission was appealed to it declared it had no jurisdiction.

KILLS RATTLESNAKE, THEN TWO SKUNKS

SOUTH HADLEY FALLS, July 18.—Maurice Fitzgerald, superintendent of the water works, is ready for anything now. He has survived encounters with a rattlesnake and a brace of skunks in the same afternoon. Maurice believes he is dangerous. He spied the rattler in the road and hit it with one blow of a stick. Then he met two skunks. They got away from him two skunks. They got away from him two skunks. They got away from him then, but a few minutes later he came across them again and dispatched both. He was not injured in any way, odorous or otherwise.

NEW GEYSER DUE IN YELLOWSTONE PARK

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Unaccounted for eruptions of large quantities of water, steam, sand and boulders by rocks and trees from a hundred feet, from the Hot Springs in the Norris Basin in Yellowstone National Park, have been occurring during the Summer. It is possible another geyser may be born in the park.

LORD CAMOYS DENIES TROTH

LONDON, July 18.—Another international romance has come to naught. The widely heralded engagement between Miss Mildred Sherman, the American heiress, and Lord Camoys proves to have had no foundation in fact. Lord Camoys himself denied it today in the following announcement:

"It is a complete surprise to me. The lady is so charming I wish I could say the report is true, but my first knowledge of it came through the newspapers."

RECIPROCITY AS CANADA ISSUE

OTTAWA, Ont., July 18.—A session of Parliament with reciprocity as the issue is the prospect generally accepted by both liberals and conservatives who are returning to the capital for the adjourned session of Parliament.

It is understood the government will mark the resumption of the session by again putting the reciprocity bill before the house and that the conservatives will resume their filibuster to prevent a vote.

WIFE TRAILS MALDEN MAN

As the result of a raid upon his home led by his wife, Timothy E. Powell, No. 175 Main street, Malden, for 20 years a truant officer in that city, and a telephone operator, were arraigned in the Malden police court to-day.

Mrs. Powell led private detectives to her home, where doors were broken down, and, it is alleged, Mr. Powell and the operator were discovered.

The young woman was promised by the shock of her arrest. He is the only support of her invalid mother in Charlestown.

GUNS TO SHOOT BEYOND HORIZON

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Guns that will carry their projectiles clear out of sight will be placed in the turrets of the new battleships of the New York type. One of these guns has been made at the Washington factory, and a dozen others will follow as rapidly as the great lathes can turn them out.

The gun has been tried out at the proving ground and has shown that it is, without doubt, the most powerful naval weapon in the world. With a muzzle velocity of 2,400 feet a second the shell will have a range of about 14 or 15 miles, consequently it will land far beyond the horizon at extreme elevation.

It might hit a ship that the gunners could not see or friend or foe, perhaps. Hence the ordnance officers will be unusually careful when the ships mounting these guns go out for target practice.

Leaders in Leather Men's Outing

SUBWAY BILLS ARE ENGROSSED

Direct and indirect attacks having failed to defeat the subway and merger bills in the House, both measures are slated for the formal engrossment stage today and will be in the Governor's hands for his signature on Friday.

The indirect attack on the West End Elevated merger bill was made in the form of an amendment by Representative Cox of Ward 24, providing that the hours of labor by L employes should not be more than nine out of eleven consecutive hours. Representatives Reid and Lomasney at once came to the aid of the bill. Reid made the point of order that the amendment was beyond the scope of the petition.

Speaker Walker ruled the point of order not well taken, stating that the Legislature in granting privileges has the right to impose limitations. Cox's amendment, the bill gives the Elevated valuable rights and that the Elevated should be willing to give concessions to its employes.

Hardly any opposition opposed the Cox way amendment as placing the entire bill in jeopardy.

While of Newton opposed the bill itself, he said that its only apparent vice was the Governor, who had gone back on the warning contained in his inaugural message, beware of legislation drafted behind closed doors.

White Readings Opposed.

White also criticised the Governor for his interest in the matter because of his holdings in the Elevated. He then showed the opinions from former Attorney General Parker, Malone and Cunningham. He wanted the clerk to read these, but this was objected to on the ground that it created a precedent.

Choking of Reason pleaded for the bills, for he had been pleased for the greatest subway development ever planned for Boston. But in order to give the Elevated a chance to finance the project the company must have a reasonable tenure of transportation and must not be voting down to the new amendments as the one offered by Cox-way.

Newton and Lomasney favored the bill. Tim Ward S. Representative said that he had opposed the "omnibus" bill in the committee and that he had reserved the right to dissent. But he said: "This is far different from the omnibus bill. The bill has two separate bills providing for subway construction and for the control of the West End by the Elevated in an entirely different way. I fought the first bill and the subway issues. But this is a reasonable measure. I hope it will go through unamended."

Lomasney Is Attacked.

Conway scored Lomasney, who, he said, was furthering his own selfish ends. He declared that Lomasney had impugned his motives. Lomasney's reply was that he had not impugned Conway's motives.

Dean of Wakefield favored the bill, saying that West End stockholders should be made to give up their pound of flesh or throw up their franchise.

The Conway amendment was defeated by a vote of 29 to 99 and the bill ordered to a third reading.

The bill providing for the three new subways was then taken up. Bagley of East Boston offered an amendment providing for the abolition of the 1 cent transfer, the said 1 cent fare people of East Boston have to pay a special fee of $12,000 a year.

Lomasney pointed out that the tolls are to be abolished after 1922. Bagley replied that he did not know.

Cox of Dorchester said that the amendment would cause the bill unnecessary, as the Elevated and would prevent the building of the subways.

Lomasney read an opinion from the Supreme Court that the Legislature has the right to do away with the tolls until the present bonds are paid.

Choking closed the debate for the bill and moved the previous question, which was carried by a vote of 124 to 80. Then the bill was ordered to a third reading.

200 SHOE MEN ON AUTO TOUR

The delegates here for the shoe and leather week enjoyed a trip in automobiles along the North Shore today as the guests of the Essex County Shoe and Leather Association. Forty cars, containing 200 men, left the Mechanics' Building at 10 o'clock this morning and were joined by others along the way.

In the pilot car were William Armstrong, president of the Essex County Shoe and Leather Association, Charles C. Hoyt, president of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, C. C. Jacobsen, manager of the Shoe and Leather Market Fair and bugler whose calls signalled the start and stops to be made.

In honor of thirty-five visiting Canadians, the cars in the parade flew the British union flag, with the badge of the Dominion.

Their route took the visitors over the Harvard Bridge to Cambridge, and then by the State Highway and Lynn Boulevard to Lynn. Here, after a short length of welcome by Mayor William T. Cudney, the party was increased by others who had brought the total up to 250.

Proceeding to Salem over the North Shore Drive, they inspected the first shoe store in America.

At Beverly the tourists were the guests of the United Shoe Machinery Company, who provided luncheon, showed them the newest plant where the shoe machinery is made, the country club recently given by the company to its employes and the summer home of President Taft.

The party returned about 4 o'clock after going as far as Manchester and Magnolia. The auto trip was the last important event of the shoe and leather week, but the fair in the Mechanics' building will remain open till next Wednesday.

WIDOW FIGHTS FOR $500,000

Mrs. Hazel Pratt Woodbridge, widow of William Butler Woodbridge, known in Boston as "the wizard of the cooperative business," has begun a fight for the removal of the executors of his $500,000 will.

Armed with a commission to take oral depositions issued by Judge Eliot of the Norfolk County Probate Court, Attorney Daniel J. Daley of the law firm of Whipple, Sears & Ogden, will start in New York to-morrow on the first battle which may eventually bring into the case the Columbian National Life Insurance Company of Boston, with total insurance business of $50,000,000.

The commission empowers Attorney Daley to take oral depositions of George H. Woodward, vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York; Frederick T. Ecker, treasurer of the Metropolitan Life; James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of No. 32 Nassau street, New York, a former director of the Columbian National Life and an executor of the Woodbridge will; Harry W. Martin of New York, a former manager of the Columbian National Life Company.

The executors of the will which the petition seeks to have removed are Frederick T. Gaines of Needham, Archibald V. M. Cabot of Chelmsford, a former director of the Columbian National Life Company, and Colonel Percy Parker of Lowell, a former director of the Columbian National Life Company.

Mr. Woodbridge was killed in an automobile accident on the North Shore June 15, 1905. In the car with him at the time besides the chauffeur were Arthur E. Childs, now president of the Columbian National Life Insurance Company, and S. H. Wolfe of New York, an intimate friend and business associate.

In an elaborate and detailed will filed following his death Mr. Woodbridge bequeathed the estate of approximately half a million dollars to his widow, Mrs. Hazel Pratt Woodbridge, and his sons, West Pratt Woodbridge and William B. Woodbridge, 2d. Other than the executors, Gaines, Parker and Westervelt, and an instrument which showed the estate had shrunk from half a million to about $200,000.

KING AND QUEEN IN OLD SCOTCH CASTLE

EDINBURGH, July 18.—King George and Queen Mary to-day, in the grounds of the old palace of Holyrood, whose walls for eight centuries have been a history of misery, crowned the royal company of archers and presented a new standard to the company. The King and Queen are quartered in the modern part of the palace, but they spent much of the time in the old wing wherein some of the strangest passages in the dramatic life of unfortunate Mary, Queen of Scots," were enacted. The King is suffering from a severe soreness of the throat.

25-FOOT YAWL IS ON WAY TO ITALY

GIBRALTAR, July 18.—The American auxiliary yawl Sea Bird, which arrived from the Azores, sailed to-day for Italy. Captain Thomas F. Daly of New York, and his companions, T. R. Goodwin and F. B. Thurber of Providence, R. I., reported a pleasant trip across the Atlantic. In their twenty-five-foot craft they left Providence on June 10, and arrived at Horta in Azores in 17½ days, made the trip of approximately 3,500 miles in thirty-five sailing days.

VERMONT SUFFERING A SEVERE DROUTH

WESTFIELD, Vt., July 18.—The memory of the oldest inhabitant of this section of Vermont fails to recall a time when the Missisco Valley has been so parched and dry as it is this Summer. For many weeks there has been no rain, except for a few scattered thunder showers. The springs, wells and streams are lower than ever known here. Every day during the first twelve days of July the thermometer stood at or above 90 degrees from six to ten hours, and on several occasions the mercury rose above the century mark. A great shortage in all crops is predicted unless rain comes soon.

PRISONER A SUICIDE BY IRON BEDSTEAD

EAST GREENWICH, R. I., July 18.—Samuel Hamlet of Crompton committed suicide in the county jail to-day by cutting his throat on the jagged edge of an iron bedstead in his cell. There were three other prisoners in the cell with Hamlet at the time. He had been arrested for drunkenness. The authorities believe the suicide was done while in a fit of delerium tremens.

ON HONEYMOON IN WHITE MOUNTAINS

Mr. and Mrs. Laelan J. Fosdick, prominent in Dorchester society, who were married yesterday at the home of the bride, No. 31A Everett avenue, are on a wedding journey in the White Mountains. The bride, who was Miss Julia Penley, is a large realty owner in Dorchester and her husband is a merchant and author.

Did You Ever Hear of Boys' $1.50 Wash Suits AT 37c

Two weeks ago we had a sale of 150 boys' $1.00 Wash Suits at 37c. We never expected to be able to offer a better value, and thousands of parents took our advice and bought a summer supply of suits for the boys. Much to our surprise a manufacturer offered us 5000 $1.00 and $1.50 Wash Suits at 37c. Now, any common sense person knows that $1.50 Wash Suits cannot be sold for 37c without involving a tremendous loss. So there must be a reason for it.

Here's the Reason

The manufacturer stops making Wash Suits about July 1st to prepare to go to work on Fall Suits. He found that he had on hand several thousand yards of wash materials, in short lengths or ends of pieces. To get rid of these remnants, and at the same time keep his factory busy, he made up these suits at a price that will put him into bankruptcy in no time under other circumstances.

The Suits Are Here

In Russian, sailor and military styles, 2½ to 10-year sizes, all the new plain and fancy patterns in several different weaves of wash fabrics, all guaranteed fast color. Choice 37c. 4 suits for $1.48.

PAVLOVA HAS LONDON RIVAL

By ALAN DALE.

LONDON, July 18.—That Imperial Theatre of St. Petersburg reminds me of a conjurer's hat, from which an ever-inexhaustible supply of ribbons is persistently pulled. Evidently there are no limits to the "Russian dancers" that are constantly being shot forth into our midst from that theatre. The house must be a forty-story skyscraper, otherwise I don't see how it could possibly accommodate all its Russian dancers. The cry is still They come! They come! The Imperial Theatre of St. Petersburg seems to be as "traditional" as the Mayflower, which, according to modern estimation, must have been twice as large as the Lusitania.

And so at the Alhambra I saw another batch of toe-twinklers from that Russian house, presented with much heraldry. In a new, elaborate and shimmering ballet called "The Dance Dream," invented by Alexander Gorsky. The latest aspirant for Pavlovian honors must she come from Pavlova a close second, I am bound to admit—is called Catrina Geltzer and may she find that "C" is a good stylish initial emphasize). Before appearing in London she had done a very successful turn in Paris. She is young, slim and pretty, with dainty auburn hair that appears to be quite natural. Geltzer calls herself a "ballerina assoluta," and, when she comes to think of it, there is no reason on earth why she shouldn't call herself anything she likes, is there?

"Quite Effectively Sneezed."

The "gentleman" who assists her in her pirouettistic endeavors, a la Mordkin, is called Tichenkroff, a name that, at least, may be quite effectively sneezed. A long "argument" of "The Dance Dream," on the Alhambra programme, proved to be as gorgeously inane as such "arguments" usually happen to be. And why "arguments"? I'd like to know. Surely nobody on earth would argue on the subject.

The Geltzer girl appeared consecutively as the Ideal, a Cloud, an Indian Dancer, an Amazon, a Tzigane and a Polarbirdish or Russian noblewoman. The gentleman with the sneezy name leaped forth as a warrior, a Scythian, a Tzigane, and a noble. According to the program, they acted a story that has never been acted before. According to my eyes, Lemaitred very carefully, they danced a story that has been danced at least ninety times. Then she smiled, as she stood on tiptoe, and moved quickly around. He smiled, too, as he executed those revolutions that, I think, makes a man look such a bittheerr. He seized her in his arms and held her as she pretended to swoon. She gradually "came to," and jumped lightly to the ground. Then the two of them, looking delightfully silly, capered to and fro, and finally disappeared.

You've seen Pavlova and Mordkin do it a dozen times. You've seen others do it, not wisely, but too well. So have I. Yet, glancing at my program, I discover that all this meant the following: "The warrior's fancy has now transported him to India, where, in a magnificent palace, he sees himself rich and a Rajah, but in the midst of these gorgeous surroundings, and in spite of the blandishments of beautiful women dancing before him and strewing his path with flowers he is love-sick and still yearns for his Ideal!"

Exactly why a gentleman who yearns for his Ideal should suddenly stand in the centre of the stage and twirl round and round like a dancing Dervish I cannot quite make out. As somebody of histrionic importance remarked—and I think it was Wallack—"I can understand people singing their legs, but I'll be d—d if I can understand men dancing their woes."

In spite of which Catrina Geltzer is very nice indeed. She may lack something of the "personality" of Pavlova, but she has a good deal of charm, grace and fascination. She is quite as good as it is necessary to be. One "measure" tickled me enormously. It was a sort of leaping dance, done with Tichenkroff, to the strains of "The Blue Danube," that undying and lovely old chestnut. This was delicious. Another dance, to one of Chopin's nocturnes —that in E flat, I think—was also excellent. The two also pranced around to suggestions from the music of Tschaikowsky, Rubinstein, Brahms, Glazounov and Lourgiel. In addition to Geltzer and the sneezy-named one, there were Novikoff, Jelkoff and Adamovitch.

"Worthy of Belasco."

Are there any more Russian dancers in Russia? What amuses me is to hear that those I have are not considered A1 in their own country—Pavlova, for instance. Probably, then, we've started with the third class, and are working our way toward the first class. It is certainly a lavorious way, but we ought to get there toward the middle of the century if we go at it diligently. And we do—we do.

I'd like you to see the setting of these London ballets. They are surely magnificently staged—not artistically, but magnificently. One scene in "The Dance Dream" was worthy of inspired Belasco. As the curtain rose, one saw the summit of the hills enveloped in clouds, which gradually changed into dancers. Among these dancers the nun, dreaming, saw his ideal. Finally the clouds disappeared, leaving nothing before his gaze but a starlit sky. Very exquisitive it was.

Just the same, one solid hour of it is "enough." It is hard work reading meanings into this sort of stuff. It may mean anything, everything or nothing. The more we see of it, as a fact, the less it means. And the more ballets produced, the denser and more incomprehensible grow these eternal "arguments" on the program.

NEW FIREMEN ORDER HUNG UP

Acting Mayor Collins's order appropriating $25,000 by transfer from the reserve fund, to be expended by the fire commissioner for the employment of fifty extra firemen, must be passed upon by City Auditor Mitchell and Fire Commissioner Daly before it can go into effect. The order will remain in the Mayor's office for twenty-four hours pending reconsideration of the order as passed by the Boston City Council at its stormy session last night. Mayor Collins received the order to-day, and it awaits his signature.

"Will you approve the order and place the funds at the disposal of Fire Commissioner Daly?" was the question put to City Auditor Mitchell to-day.

"When the order comes I will consult Corporation Counsel Hahson," he replied. "What action I will take then remains to be seen. I will not say what I intend to do until the order comes to me, which will not be for twenty-four hours, as all orders are held for that time pending reconsideration and the mayor's signature. The report that I have already stated that I would not approve the payroll of the men appointed under such an order is not true. I have made no statement of the kind."

"Will you appoint the 50 firemen called for in the acting mayor's order?" Commissioner was asked.

"I will not answer that question," he replied, "until the funds are available. The order must go from the Mayor's office to the city auditor. If he decides that the funds are available it is up to me to act. I will not say what I will do until the order comes to me. I have made no statement about what I will do as yet."

LEGISLATURE RUSHES WORK

Every wheel in the State's legislative machinery was oiled to-day in the hope of closing the present session by next Saturday night. The session is now the second longest in the history of the State. The second highest previous mark was passed yesterday. If the session lasts till a week from Friday it will break all records.

Some of the most important measures of the year are yet to be acted on. The West End-Elevated railway bills, the $9,000,000 harbor bill, the workmen's compensation bill, the taxation statement penalty bill and the State Finance Commission recommendation, must all have their fate decided before the Legislature can prorogue.

If all of these measures are enacted into law, the present week will be a fitting ending to the present session. The session of 1911 has accomplished more progressive work than any previous session. It will be remembered especially for what it has done to bring public officers nearer to the electorate and for what it has done to better working conditions for men, women and children laborers.

Benefits for the electorate have been brought about chiefly through the new Direct Nominations law and through the amending of the corrupt practices statutes to provide real penalties for those who try to buy their way into public office. Betterment of working conditions has been brought about through the enactment of the 8-hour law for employees on public works, the 54-hour bill for women and children and the labor anti-injunction bill.

YARMOUTH EARL NOW BANKRUPT

LONDON, July 18.—The Earl of Yarmouth, former husband of Alice Thaw, has reached the end of his financial string. He will formally become a bankrupt to-day when a receiver will take possession of Abbeymede, the country seat at Bourne End, where the Earl led so luxurious a life during the first years of his marriage to his American Countess.

It is presumed that whatever of value is left in the historic house will be sold for the benefit of the almost countless creditors whom the Earl has been holding off for years.

The father of the Earl, the old Lord Hertford, it is said, has refused to advance a farthing to save the son from bankruptcy. But there have been reports that some of the Earl's possessions have been transferred to his father and cannot be touched by creditors.

Perhaps, in his line, the young noble man took a lesson from his former wife, who so cleverly arranged the provisions of her marriage dowry that she got back $500,000 worth of Pittsburg real estate after she had obtained an annulment of the marriage.

The financial fortunes of the Earl of Yarmouth have been going from bad to worse ever since the annulment. It is said he spent before that the $1,600,000 in negotiable paper which he received outright when he shared his title with the daughter of the Pittsburg millionaire. It is also said that he had failed to realize more money by selling the $500,000 worth of real estate which, according to reports, he extorted from his bride-to-be and her lawyer a few hours before the wedding.

MILITIA GETS READY TO MOVE

The militia regiments of Massachusetts are hard at work getting ready to go to war next Saturday. At the State House the clerks in the quartermaster's and adjutant-general's offices are fast completing arrangements for transporting the regiments to Essex county—the scene of the war—and of feeding them during the week they are there.

The "Blues," or United States army, will mobilize Sunday at Billerica. The chief object of its existence will be to try to recapture Boston from the "Reds" army which captured Boston last Summer.

Each company in each regiment will carry its own cooking utensils. Each company is allowed two wall tents for officers, one will tent for supplies and one wall tent for emergencies.

The problem of assembling the entire State militia in twenty-four hours from various parts of the State is a difficult one, but the experience gained last year has been of great assistance. Orders have been sent to every company in every regiment of the State, telling of their home and places of departure. Special trains have been ordered to be at these points.

A BLOOD BUILDER

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured This West Virginia Man.

He Was Anaemic and His Stomach Was in Bad Condition and Ordinary Remedies Did Him No Good.

When the body is weak and the blood thin it is sometimes difficult to find the cause unless a wasting illness has preceded the decline in health.

Obscure influences, something unhealthful in one's surroundings or work, may lead to a slow impoverishment of the blood and an enfeeblement of the whole body. When a serious stage has been reached there seems to be nothing that will account for it.

In such cases a complete change of climate or of work will sometimes effect a cure. It takes a long time, however, and for the great majority of sufferers is out of the question.

Mr. G. E. Legg, of Tipton, W. Va., has found a method of treating weakness and bloodlessness, that is simple, cheap, within reach of everybody, and within the limits of his experience successful every time. He says:

"I have tested Dr. Williams' Pink Pills several times personally and they have never yet failed to build up the system and renew the blood.

"I used them on one occasion for weakness caused by a lingering malarial fever that began in the spring of 1898. The worst effects of this were indigestion and a bad state of my blood. I was anaemic, as the doctors say. People generally would say that I didn't have blood enough, or that I didn't have the right kind of blood; mine was too thin. My kidneys and liver were out of order. I was badly annoyed by sour risings from my stomach. There was a good deal of pain, too, in my back and under my right shoulder blade.

"I was sick for over two years and for months of that time I was under the care of a physician, but his medicine did me no good. Meanwhile I learned of the cures that had been wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I owe my cure to their use and cheerfully recommend them. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have real merit and I know of nothing that would take their place."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Send for our free diet and "Diseases of the Blood" booklets.

TELLS HINES'S BOAST, "I ELECTED LORIMER"

WASHINGTON, July 18.—That Edward Hines boasted that he elected William Lorimer to the United States Senate was the testimony of Donald M. Frame before the Lorimer investigating committee to-day. Frame is a clerk at the cigar counter in the Union League Club in Chicago. He was selling cigars to H. H. Hettler on May 26, 1909, the day on which Lorimer was elected, when Edward Hines came out of a telephone booth and accosted Hettler. Frame testified that he heard Hines say: "I elected Lorimer." Isaac Baker testified that while he and others were in Cook's room at the hotel the telephone bell rang and Cook answered it. It was a call for Hines. The witness heard Hines say: "I have talked to the Governor, and he will see you. Then there was a pause. Again Hines said: "Now you understand how the administration feels about it. Don't leave a stone unturned to get elected. Then a pause, and again Hines spoke: "If necessary I will come down to Springfield to-morrow on the train."

The Mystery of the Nine Missing Letters in the Stokes Shooting Case Illustrated

Detective Cummings, who is employed by Stokes, admitted having taken a package of letters from the apartment of the young women in the Varuna after the shooting. He disclaimed any knowledge of the nine missing letters.

Attorney Clark L. Jordan announced after the preliminary trial that he believed Stokes knew where the missing letters were. He added that they had probably been turned over to Stokes, and that he thought the millionaire had burned them.

As the result of testimony given by Cummings charges were preferred against four city detectives before the Police Trial Board. At their trial they tried to show that John Bloom, superintendent of the Varuna, took the missing letters.

Lillian Graham believes that the letters were turned over to Bloom after Ling stolen. She says he went to the apartment on the morning of the shooting to demand the letters, and that one of his employees stole them after the trouble occurred.

Ethel Conrad shares the opinion of Miss Graham. She says Stokes had detectives trying to get the letters away from the apartment some time before the shooting. These men frequently watched the girls.

Detective James P. McCormick of the West Sixty-eighth street police station testified at the trial of his four associates that Miss Graham told Inspector Russell that there were no missing letters at all.

Detective J. M. Flynn, one of those on trial, said that all of the detectives and patrolmen left the apartment with the two prisoners shortly after the shooting. On their return Bloom admitted them.

Attorney George Gordon Battle, who is defending the detectives, will try to show that Bloom obtained the missing letters from the apartment and then turned them over to a private detective named Bensund.

And here is the famous trunk. Detective Devery testified that he lifted the tray out of it. Deputy Commissioner Dillon testified that the tray is joined to the trunk by a hinge, and that the tray could not be removed.

BOSTON PARTY SEEING BERLIN

BERLIN, July 18.—The Berlin Chamber of Commerce and the City of Berlin each tendered a reception to the Boston Chamber of Commerce touring party to-day. At 9 o'clock the visitors were entertained at luncheon by the municipality. The party divided in the afternoon. Some visited the homes for the aged and for inebriates, which are under municipal control and also inspected the sewage farm system operated by Berlin. Others visited the national art gallery, the Kaiser Friedrich Museum and the Industrial Art Museum.

Busy Time in Berlin.

The Boston party has had a busy time in Berlin, and has been given a great deal of civic and individual attention. At a reception tendered it by the Berlin Board of Trade, Doctor Knoerch, director of commercial schools in the capital of Germany, delivered an address on the work such institutions are doing in his country. Another address was by Doctor Bing, whose subject was the "High Schools of Commerce." An addition to the Berlin High School of Commerce followed. Since the Boston party has been in this city it has visited the royal palaces of Emperor William, motored to Potsdam to inspect the system of fire accident protection apparatus installed in the Siemens-Schuckert works and also seen the Kunstausstellung, the German salon of modern art.

Feted by Officials.

When the party was given a reception by the American Association of Commerce in Berlin it was addressed on the German food law by Count von Bothko of the Imperial Treasury. Ministerial Director Lusensky also spoke on factory inspection.

The Boston party will leave Berlin for Dresden to-morrow afternoon.

F. J. Meisnac of the Boston AMERICAN staff, who is with the party abroad, will have a page in next Sunday's AMERICAN full of the most interesting details of the trip made by the Boston party.

TRY NAVY PAYMASTER.

VALLEJO, Cal., July 18.—A naval court entered upon the trial of Arthur M. Pilsbin, paymaster of the receiving ship Independence at Mare Island Navy Yard, who is charged with general misconduct of his office and the embezzlement of $6,685 of the funds in his hands.

FIFTY FLEE IN PANIC AT FIRES

Three tenement house fires in different parts of Boston, early to-day, caused panic among the occupants and forced fifty or more persons to flee into the street in their night clothing. The damage caused by all the fires did not exceed $500 but many fires were endangered by the dense smoke.

Persons living in the various houses were assisted to the street by policemen and firemen and all managed to escape injury although several were overcome by smoke while groping their way down stairs. Two of the fires were of unknown origin while the third was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

A blaze which caused a damage of $250 started in the basement of the four story brick dwelling house at Nos. 27 and 29 Hudson street, South End, either in the section occupied by George F. Jarrell, who conducts a periodical store on the first floor at No. 27, or that which is occupied by J. Deraay & Son, dealers in Oriental goods on the same floor of No. 29.

The three upper floors of the building were occupied by families. About thirty persons were asleep in the house, which is situated in a thickly populated tenement district, when a man passing the stores saw smoke pouring from the basement windows and sounded an alarm.

Several men, attracted by the cries of fire, rushed into the building and after awakening the occupants assisted them to the street. The firemen on arrival found the fire in the basement but the smoke was so thick in the apartments overhead that it was more than half an hour after the fire had been extinguished before the persons living in the house could return to their apartments.

While the firemen were putting out this blaze they were told that a kerosene lamp had exploded and set fire to the lodging house at No. 78 Harrison avenue. The crew of Ladder 17 were sent to the house and arrived there to find several of the lodgers trying to extinguish the fire with pails of water. The blaze had scattered the fire about the room but it was extinguished before much damage had been done.

A fire in Herman Cicele's pool room at No. 109 Stanford street, West End, drove a score of persons into the street. The building is a four story brick structure. The pool room is on the first floor and the upper section of the house is occupied by families. They were awakened by the shouts of people in the street to find the house filled with smoke. A man ran to the quarters of Engine Six in Leverett street and the members of that company responded on a still alarm, arriving in time to assist the frightened occupants to the street. The fire was confined to the pool room and caused a damage of $150. The building is owned by William K. Porter.

2 STOKES CASE GIRLS INDICTED

NEW YORK, July 18.—The Grand Jury to-day indicted Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad for attempting to murder W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire hotel proprietor, whom they shot in their apartment at the Varuna. Only two witnesses were heard by the Grand Jury, Stokes and Detective James McCormick. They took an hour to give their testimony, Stokes using three-quarters of an hour in which to recite his story, the same as told in the preliminary hearing before Magistrate Freschi.

The defendants expected to be indicted and expressed the greatest willingness to let the matter go before a petit jury when they hope to give Stokes a lively time as a witness and also clear themselves on a plea of self-defence.

After their appearance before the Grand Jury the four detectives who are on trial in connection with the nine missing letters written by Stokes to Miss Graham and stolen from the latter's trunk, will be re-arraigned before First Deputy Commissioner McKay at police headquarters.

MORE ABOUT THE MONTHLY INCOME POLICY

That Insurance, which a man recently left behind him as his sole estate for the support of his widow and orphans, is gone. Cause—unwise and badly advised financiering.

THIS COULD NOT HAVE HAPPENED HAD THE INSURANCE BEEN LEFT IN THE FORM OF A CONTINUOUS MONTHLY INSTALMENT

The John Hancock Continuous Monthly Income Policy guarantees a steady monthly income in the event of your death as long as your wife (or other beneficiary) lives. If you are 38 and she is 35, by payment of approximately $14.3 annually (less dividends), she will receive at your decease $25 monthly or $300 annually for life, and if she does not survive you twenty years, the balance up to that period will be determined and paid in one sum to her executor or administrator.

You can thus secure any amount of certain income that you desire up to $250 a month, at proportionate cost. The rates vary with the combinations of ages.

DETROIT, July 18.—The final opportunity of the Red Sox in taking a game from the Tigers in the present series comes this afternoon. They have met the league leaders three times to date, and in each have felt by the wayside.

Manager Donovan is at his wits-end to solve the difficulty, and had a good heart-to-heart talk with his band of players last night. It is likely that the Red Sox have done all they could in trying to win, but it was quite evident in the game decided that something which goes with a winning baseball team has been missing.

Long has the Boston club been afflicted with the particular ailment from which the Red Sox seem to be suffering. Just why there has been no satisfactory solution, though many theories have been advanced, both through the public prints and private faufares.

Red Sox Have No "Pep."

Whatever ails Patsy Donovan's team the main symptom is plain. As Hughie Jennings would say, the Red Sox have no pep.

Their pitchers have performed better than ordinarily in the first three games of the present series, barring Jack Wadell's flat failure. In the field their game has been brilliant. Their batting and base running, too, have called for no particularly adverse criticism. But the team lacks spirit.

The coaching has been largely done here by Joe Hall and Thoney. It has been noisy enough, too, but somehow it isn't the sort that rallies the men.

Rarely, in fact never, does one of the regulars seem interested enough to go to the limit. Nor do the Boston boys talk to their pitcher and exchange words of encouragement while in the field. Hooper, an occasional peep from Larry Gardner formed the sole break in the silence while the team assembled back of Collins when pitching. Yerkes, Williams and Purtell did their own work and let Collins take care of himself.

Whatever the matter is, the fact remains that the Red Sox of the present are no longer the darling, scrappy team Detroit remembers as the American League "Speed Boys."

They lack ambition, for some cause or other, and the contrast between their play and that of the Tigers lies almost solely in this detail.

Some Bonehead Coaching.

Patsy Donovan himself says that he believes that his team has the baseball ability to win a considerable majority of its games. He thinks that part of his team's inefficiency in the West has been due to the fact that Carrigan has been out of the play for a large part of the time. But Bill is now back in harness and catching grand ball.

The lack of ambition shown by the club was noted Monday in a lost opportunity in the score. With Collins on second and two out, Carrigan singled shortly to center and the crowd expected to see the infield score. Hall, who was coaching on third base, seemed to make no sign to the runner, however, and Collins pulled up at third, where he perished, while Yerkes was being disposed of for the final out of an inning in which the team had failed to jammed two outfield singles and a perfect peg, without scoring a run.

HAPPY'S CHAMPS ARE AFTER GOOD GAMES

Happy's champs have been so busy selling the AMERICAN durin gthe past few weeks that they have not had a chance to think of ball playing, but they have decided to get back into the harness again before they forget how to play the national game.

Before taking their little layoff the Happy Newsboys had won thirteen straight games. Happy states that the mystic number thirteen is lucky for his outfit and not unlucky as many others think. The newsboys plan to get going again on the 20th of this month and any aggregation of young ball tossers who think they can show class will be given a chance to show their worth by Happy.

All that is necessary to get the chance to book up with the young news peddlers chants, is to drop a postal to Happy, care of the AMERICAN Circulation Department.

CARROLL MAY COACH LYNN SCHOOLBOYS

LYNN, July 18.—Although no official announcement has been made by the local school authorities, it is understood that Henry Carroll, the Brooklyn high school instructor, has been chosen physical director of the Lynn classical and English high schools, and will start upon his new duties next Fall.

Carroll, since coming to Brooklyn from Springfield training school, has turned out several excellent football, track, hockey and baseball teams. He has had numerous offers to coach elsewhere. Carroll started in at Brooklyn high in the Fall of 1907, and while there he has turned out four championship teams, winning two baseball titles, one, track and one foot ball championship.

REBEL PLAYERS STANDING PAT

By R. W. LARDNER.

This is a very important Tuesday. Before its close the fate of followers of the Rustlers will probably know whether the team is going to finish the season without a few more surprises. Charley Herzog and Doc Miller, or to have those mighty stickwielders in the daily lineup, just as they were before Saturday's big blowoff.

The two rebellious athletes say they will leave Boston to-day unless their demands are met by the management. Miller intends to visit New York for a day or two, and then to go to San Francisco, where his brother has offered him a partnership in his practice. Herzog plans to return to his farm at Ridgeley, Me., and watch wood-chopping other than his batting average grow.

Still Standing Pat.

President Russell and Manager Tenney are standing pat. They say they will not interfere at all with the contemplated journeys. They will not seek out the rebels, nor attempt to communicate with them in any way.

That's the way it stands. The outcome remains to be seen. There's a chance that one or the other side will give in, and that for part will be in to-day's engagement against the Cubs.

An adjustment of the Herzog case is not so remote a possibility as in the Miller matter. According to the latest Hughie Jennings's line was to have been remitted to the end of the season if he played ball to their liking. It wouldn't be stretching a point nearly if they gave him his three hundred meg now, instead. They could fine him the same amount later on if they wanted to, and that would create some more excitement.

As for Doc Miller, his case is entirely different, and a little harder to settle satisfactorily. The bonus proposition and the promise of a $500 raise next year don't appeal to the right fielder. No other solemn agreements to President Russell and Manager Tenney exist. Doc's present stipend is $2,000. He wants a lift of $600, not paid in promises.

There doesn't seem to be the friendliest feeling in the world between Manager Fred and the pair. The boss doesn't say "How to you do?" to Doc when the latter enters the clubhouse and Doc doesn't volunteer information regarding his general health. Herzy and Fred have been rather cool toward each other since the New York unpleasantness. However, there have been times in the past where ball players were not exactly on cordial terms with their manager and all parties lived through it.

King's Salary Not a Factor.

The two dopy that King's fat salary has anything to do with the affair. John is popular with all the Rustlers. He tried to persuade Herzog not to quit when Charley and Fred made known his decision.

It is said that Buster Brown has asked for his release, claiming that he couldn't do himself justice under Tenney's management. This has no bearing on the Herzog-Miller tragedy, but merely goes to show that the manager has more than a lot to worry about.

There is one consolation, even if Charles and Roy "go through." The team can't possibly worse than last, and it probably wouldn't do much better than that in any event. However, if the two stick to their determination and leave our city today, the club will certainly be worse off artistically than it was. It's a hard matter to lose a couple of heavy swatters at any stage of the race, but the blow is all the more crushing coming as it does in the middle of the season.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Jones made a nice try for Zimmerman's single in the 3rd inning of the second game, but just missed it.

Kling batted for Griffin in the eighth inning of the second, and Jeff Pfeffer pitched the ninth, escaping unharmed.

Jones's double in the second round of game No. 2 sounded into the ears and the Rustlers told the youngster to come on home, but Umpire O'Day ordered him back to second.

Bill Rariden was taking desperate and rather wild chances when he tried to go from first to third on Flaherty's run to left in the final inning of the 4th. Olsen's were two out and Boston needed only one run to tie. Bill would have been almost as well off on second. Sheckard's perfectly good throw nailed him and wound up the battle.

Buster Brown finished up McGraw's game and was more effective than he has been of late.

Bob Emslie umpired the bases. It was Bob's first appearance here this season.

President Russell announced the sale of Pitcher Bill Parson to the Montreal Club of the Eastern League. Another Rustler, Billy Burke, is pitching for Montreal.

Harry Steinfeldt has gone back to his home in Bellevue, Ky., and will not join the team again until his finger is entirely well.

The crowd got after Al Kaiser and he talked back. It made his life interesting anyway.

I think that his name was Barney Mc-Toog—
Got a terrible beating the other day
From a rough right fielder, by name O'Shay.

FRISCO MAY GET "HOPE" BATTLE

By ED. W. SMITH.

There is a good chance now that Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and Carl Morris, the Oklahoma giant, will battle twenty rounds in the city of San Francisco early in September. Clark's Club in Frisco has opened negotiations for the match and there is every probability that this organization can and will outbid any rival for the attraction.

This is the organization in which Tom O'Day, one of the best fellows in the world, is interested. Tom is now in New York putting in a vacation period and at the same time doing some business. The negotiations come from the other end. Ben Riley, the happy motion picture man, is the Chicago agent of the club.

The offer was not up to Flynn, who is still lounging around Chicago, and he was for it instantly. Just what constitutes a little more definite than was contained in the early stages, but felt sure that the terms would be entirely satisfactory.

"Glad? Why, that's my middle name," chirped Flynn as he looked at the telegram informing him of the news that the Frisco Club was after the match.

"That's the only place in the world to scrap, at that," he continued in a reminiscent mood. "That's the place, first of all, where fighters draw what they are worth. And that's the sort of gamble that I'm always willing to take. Promoters don't have to guarantee me any time I'm on the boards with a good man. I know the money will come in and I fight accordingly. As a matter of fact I never had a bad house in my whole career.

"And Morris will get a square deal out there, too. It always has been said that he didn't want to leave his home ring in Oklahoma for fear of being jobbed. I don't know about the truth of that, but if he can win in California he'll win, that's all there is to that."

H. F. Ufer, Morris's latest manager, who is said to have paid an exhibitionist price for his contract, has gone on home on business connected with the moving pictures of the Morris-Schreck fight, and the offer from California was repeated to him. He replied asking two more details, and saying that he would be glad to negotiate with the people out there.

That makes almost a sure thing of it.

LITTLE AND NILES IN TENNIS MATCH

Play was resumed in the Longwood tennis tournament to-day in the second and third rounds and the championship doubles matches were started.

A large gallery gathered to see Nat W. Niles and Raymond D. Little play their match. Although they were scheduled to play yesterday, Niles who was returning from Bensleight, was stranded on the New York boat, which was some eight hours late, and only allowed him to reach the courts after it was too late to play.

Practically every New England track champion of note will be seen in action at the annual track and field day of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, which is to take place to-morrow afternoon at Columbus Grove, West Roxbury.

Among the well-known local runners who are to compete are such stars as Oscar Hedlund, New England 100-yard and mile record holder; A. C. Gutterson, New England's champion broad jumper; Drew, the sensational colored flier; Francis Cribara, the New England indoor champion; the national junior 220-yard title holder; Johnstone, champion junior high jumper of the United States; Young, intercollegiate 440-yard champion, the Bowser brothers, Llewellyn, McDougall and other well known performers.

Besides this great bunch of track and field stars there will be the veterun Martin Sheridan of the Irish American A. C. Sheridan is one of the greatest all-around athletes that ever wore a spike shoe. He is the holder of the all-around champion ship record. It was due up to mid summer to the prowess of Martin that the American team was victorious in the past two Olympic contests.

Sheridan will be seen in action in the shotput, broad jump, discus throw, and in an exhibition at throwing the 16-pound hammer. In the discus throw the famous New York Irishman will make an attempt to establish a new world's record for discus throwing from an eight-foot circle. And Martin is very likely to perform the stunt if his recent performances are to be taken as a criterion of his present condition.

In the mile run Oscar Hedlund, the dapper flier representing the Brookline Gymnasium, will be on hand. Oscar will have to do some tall hustling if he is to win as there will be some clever performers in the field who will have special privileges.

The record should see some great sprinting in the 440-yard run when Young goes up against the best-quarter milers in New England. The intercollegiate champion has been picked by the experts for this race and is confident of winning.

JOHNNY COULON WILL GO AFTER STANLEY

Johnny Coulon, bantam-weight champion, contemplates a journey to England next fall.

The main object of the trip will be to take a crack at Digger Stanley, but incidentally the Logan Square lad intends to make Jack Johnson split the honors across the water. Any number of bantams have planned this English trip to silence Stanley, but it looks as if Coulon will be the only one to go.

There is little doubt that the Chicagoan boxer is the Briton's superior, but there will be a neat remuneration behind the same and he wants to get it.

Coulon's champion in the United States next Fall will be busy also. He plans to box Jimmy Welsh, the crack Eastern featherweight champion, and possibly Young Tago, the Japanese fighter. He went fifteen rounds with Forbes recently. Frankie Conley is clamoring for a match and Johnny has promised to satisfy him. These bouts, however, will not be staged until later in the Fall, however.

JOE FERGUSON QUITS FOR K. O. BROWN MATCH

ALBANY, N. Y., July 18.—Joe Ferguson, the Philadelphia light-weight, who was scheduled to meet Knockout Brown, the New York light-weight star, sprang a funny one here on the afternoon of the bout by coming out with a la-Tommy Murphy announcement by saying that he was offered $2,000 to lay down to Knockout, and after saying it he caught the six o'clock train back to Philadelphia.

This is indeed a surprise, for Ferguson begged for a match with Brown and when he got it he waited a week and then decided a couple of hours before the fight that he did not care for any of Brown's game.

The management will get a better man than Ferguson to meet Brown to-day instead, and it is hoped that he fits, will not be as much of a "no show" as Joe put only ran out, but dodged his board bill as well.

N. E. LEAGUE ON VERGE OF SPLIT

With the expiration of the ten-year agreement in the New England League this year may come a serious break in the ranks of the organization and the formation of a new league that shall include some of the present New England League cities and others that are now connected with the Connecticut League, which was recently cut down from an eight to a six-club league.

It is known that those who are back of the scheme have been working quietly for some time and have talked with men in favorable cities in the eight clubs now in the new organization.

The plan now is to form Worcester, Lynn, Lowell and Lawrence from the New England and to join them with Springfield, Hartford, New Haven and Bridgeport in the Connecticut League, making it a New England league in fact as well as in name.

NAPS BUY HOWLEY.

UTICA, N. Y., July 18.—The Utica Field Club announced the sale of Catcher Dan Howley to the Cleveland Club, the player to report at the close of the State League season.

JOE RIVERS IS BOXING MARVEL

Just now it appears that Abe Attell, the pressent holder of the featherweight title, will not leave the pugilistic world without a successor, and a worthy one at that. The name of the likely featherweight is Joe Rivers.

Rivers makes his home in Los Angeles, is a Mexican by birth, and considered a marvel by fight experts on the Coast. His recent defeat of Joe Coster, the Brooklyn lad, alamps him as a comer, as Coster was considered by many the best of the Eastern crop of feathers.

Started Career Young.

Joe started his career as a fighter when a youngster, but nothing was thought of him until he began cleaning up the best feathers on the Coast. After defeating Jacqueville, Sullivan, Webster and Regan, all Coast men, he began going after the Eastern boys, among the first being Coster.

Tommy Dixon of Holyoke was picked as the first real opponent from the crop of the Eastern featherweight. When the bout was over the Mexican was on top, the referee, after the fighting Yaqui had purposely fooled him in the sixteenth round. Up to the time of the foul Rivers was the better of the two men. There was not a time when Tommy looked fagged, and except for the foul he did not bear the semblance of a mark.

After Dixon his next opponent from the East was Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland. The Cleveland lad lasted just twelve rounds with the Mexican before the K. O. was handed. After the Kilbane go Rivers was picked as the class of the field on the Coast, and for his opponent picked Joe Coster, of Brooklyn.

Before the Rivers bout Coster had been going like a whirlwind and bore the earmarks of a champion, having defeated Conley, who had graduated from the bantamweight ranks.

Rivers Is Great Strategist.

Those who saw the Rivers-Coster go were satisfied that there was not a moment that the Mexican did not have the better of the bout. The knockout blow, in the fifteenth round, was the finishing touch to a one-sided affair. In the third round, when the boys entered the ring, the Mexican proved to be a great strategist. He walks from the fighting corner, and looked as if he was dismissed. Coster, taking notice of this, prepared himself to land the final blow when, like a flash, the Mexican uncorked a tirrific of blows upon Coster's face before the Brooklyn lad could realize what it was all about.

The brown-skinned Mexican is a natural born fighter. He possesses a terrific wallop, and when it lands, which it most always does, it is safe to play havoc with the opponent.

Best Since Jimmy Britt.

Not only is Rivers a good hitter, but his defense is of the cleanest sort, which his opponent finds a hard thing to get past. One of his greatest assets is his ability to duck. Many times Rivers escapes one sixty-nine inches, and with the aid of his speed he takes no worst of many a blow. While in the ring he never gives the impression that he is fighting himself, he is after his man hammer and tongs, and will not let up a minute in his going after his opponent.

Many fights on the Coast think Rivers is the best featherweight produced there since the days of Jimmy Britt. Probably a little more will be heard from the Mexican matter of fact, it is believed that he should decide to give up the fight game Joe would be the lucky one to get the championship crown.

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES BREAK WITH A. A. U.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The alliance of the Athletic League of North America with the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States has terminated. This has been stated for the past eight years, but took definite shape at the last annual meeting of the directors of the league.

The Athletic League of North America is composed of the Young Men's Christian Associations. From what has been learned it does not believe that the present Athletic Union should have control of its athletes or should sanction any of its fixtures. This league wants to control its own sports and to withdraw registration of individuals.

This break is not at all pleasing to the athletes and some of the branches that are registered with the Amateur Athletic Union, it is believed. The split will probably cause some of the athletes of the Y. M. C. A. to demand their release or run unattached if the release is not forthcoming.

GEORGE BROWN WILL JUDGE AT EVENTS

George V. Brown of the Boston Athletic Association has accepted an invitation to serve as one of the three judges at the Clan-Na-Gael games at Rocky Point next Thursday afternoon, in which the Boston Athletic Association will be represented by a large team of its best men, as will the Irish-Americans Club and several other prominent organizations.

GOLF GOSSIP CLUB NOTES

To-morrow will find the best golfers in the press in competition at the Allston Golf Club. This is their annual championship meeting, and an innovation, for the tournament will be held but one day, and medal play rather than match play will rule. The best score for thirty-six holes will take the title and the perpetual John I. Taylor trophy, for one year. Robert Van Amringe of the Transcript, who won the cup last year, will not defend his title to-morrow.

Seashore courses and those in the country have their troubles. The Pepperell Country Club has put wires around some of the greens to keep the cows off. This is not uncommon, but is slightly disconcerting to the player who always has a feeling that his ball is going to hit one of the wires, and that a possible two or three will be spoiled.

Rosat County is the topic of the Bay State golfers at present, and the field that will play in the qualifying round next Saturday is representative of the best talent in this State. The players will qualify in three or four divisions for match play, the first flight playing at scratch and the others with match play handicaps.

The Hatherly Golf Club, which supports a nine-hole Summer course at North Scituate Beach, has an invitation tournament scheduled for Saturday of this week, and will attract at least eighty of the golfers of this vicinity. Luncheon is served at the club and the members are most hospitable. Those who have entered tournaments there in former years are enthusiastic over this one-day handicap meeting at the seashore.

The national tournament for the amateur championship of the United States will be held at the Apawamis Club at Rye, N. Y., this year, from September 11 to 16. Massachusetts was the selecting host year, the contests being held at the Country Club, Brookline. Warren A. Wood, who recently defeated Jerome D. Travers for the cup at Ekwanok, was runner-up in the national golf championship. There is a possibility that he may play at Essex on Thursday.

The manner in which different clubs succeed in defeating "Bogey" for their own courses is remarkable. Last Saturday, when club contests of the handicap in Bogey nature were the rule, the handicap committee at the Brown Club went into the limelight. Given a correct Bogey for the course, and it seems hard to think of more than half of the field defeating the "School."

The Bay State team match with Rhode Island will come on September 23 this year and will be played over the course of the Agawam Hunt Club at Providence.

Francis Ouimet played a seventy-four at Woodland Saturday while H. L. Dexter, Jr., made a funky at Brae-Burn, having a card of seventy-five.

FLYNN CALLS OFF JEANETTE BOUT

Danny (Porky) Flynn of the West End will not be able to face Joe Jeanette on night at New York in their scheduled ten-round bout.

Flynn is a motor boat enthusiast, and while trying to repair something about the engine of his boat Monday Flynn had one of his fingers jammed so badly that he had to have a physician attend it.

Just as soon as Flynn's finger get well he says he will be ready to go on with the match.

While the injury is not of a very serious nature, it is bad enough to prevent him from drawing on a glove and doing himself justice against so formidable a foe as the New Yorker. Flynn will want to be at his best when he encounters Jeanette.

the pitcher of the Umperiners, and the Wild Cats copped the game from behind his back. The score was about forty-seven to forty-five. The score keeper threw up his job in the seventh inning and went swimming.

The boys all said it was two weeks for baseball. Eaglebeak Spruder also interfered after the game, sitting in the shade of an ash barrel, said: "Aw, I wasn't tryin'. A guy's a rummy for slug a ball around in weather like dis. I can't be done, dat's all. I done de best I could. Now lemme alone. I don't want to talk—you hot. Hey, Jimmy, you get de price of a lemon phosphate? I'll pay yer back de first time I get any money. Interfered! I'm done."

We will admit that the above is a pretty cheesy interview for first-class baseball experts to get from a fellow like Eaglebeak Spruder, but we have it to anybody—what can you expect from a fellow who thinks it is the highbrow act to go crazy with the heat?

Jimmy McBride, who thought he was going to get rich running a bus to and from the games, went broke. His bus consisted of a made-over wheelbarrow with an awning over it for shade.

As soon as he started in business yesterday four-kids paid the price and took seats in his vehicle, but when he went to lift the handles he was in wrong. He could no more shift his four passengers an inch than the Statue of Liberty can do the grizzly bear.

After several attempts he had to give up trying. He, too, blames his misfortune on the heat. He told us last night that if he had not been so weak from not being able to sleep nights lately he could have copped off a small fortune in pennies.

At the beginning of yesterday's game there were about forty fans on hand. At the beginning of the fourth inning there were only six by actual count.

There will be another game to-morrow between the same two teams. All to-day's news happenings will be graphically told in to-morrow's paper.

"US BOYS" IS A REGULAR FEATURE OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN. DON'T MISS THE DOINGS OF THE BRIGHT YOUNGSTERS OF THE "MALGUMATED LEGE" IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Starting on Credit

What the Modest Young Man Didn't Know.

By KENNETT HARRIS.

THERE was once a modest young man of some ability who debated with himself a most momentous question and at the end found himself unable to arrive at a decision. Thereupon he went to a certain old oracle of the village, who habitually wore one leg of his trousers thrust into the leg of one of his boots, and was popularly supposed to dribble wisdom, as well as tobacco juice, and laid the case before him.

"Buddy," said the oracle. "I'm glad you came to me, because owing to a natural modesty of speech and an apparent insensibility to the ordinary effects of rye whisker, as well as carelessness of personal appearance and scorn of moralizing, I've observed in men of great intellect, I am able to set you right on almost any subject. I am an old man and I am tool-eyed. There fore I say, without any hesitation or fear of successful contradiction, that the very best thing for a young man to do is to get into debt. The logic of the thing is obvious. If you get in a hole you will wiggle like Sam Hill to get out of it, and it is the wiggler who succeeds in life."

"I see," said the young man.

"Of course you see, because I have put it to you simply and clearly," said the oracle. "If I were redundant, verbose and addicted to superfluities of argument, I might point out that nineteen-twentieths of the business of this grand country of ours is done upon credit. Mountains are levelled, rivers turned aside, lightning chained, cataracts harnessed, cities built and empires established on credit. Credit is the soul and impetus of enterprise. Without credit, capital would not exist, for there would be no earthly use for it. You have the capital of brain and muscle, health and energy. All you need is the additional capital of a few dirty dollars. Go borrow some. Then you can hustle to pay 'em back."

He Sees the Major.

"I'm much obliged," said the young man.

"Would you—er!—Have—you—er? Do you think you could spare me—"

"You go see the Major over to the bank," suggested the oracle. "He's got wads of money to lend."

So the modest but able young man went over to the bank and saw the Major, who wore a white tooth-brush mustache and glistening eyeglasses on an aquiline nose.

"Major," said the young man, "I'm thinking of borrowing some money."

"Son," returned the Major, "I implore you to think again. Take a good long think; take several of them—and please close the door as you go out, for it's a trifle draughty and as long as I've been in this bank, I can't get used to draughts."

"Theyre no worse than cheques," contorted the young man, closing the door and returning to the mahogany aforesaid. "I have thought," he continued, "and have consulted the oracle, though I could n't work him. But he has convinced me that it is a good thing for a young man to get into debt."

"If the young man can find a good thing, perhaps," admitted the Major. "On the other hand, I am inclined to think that you have been listening to some specious sophistry. I heard of a young man once who bought a horse that was perfectly sound in wind and limb, free of blemish, and with the disposition of an amiable kitten, and the morning after the sale the horse died. The young man had not paid cash for the animal. He had agreed to work for the former owner and let his wages stand as a purchase price."

Paying For Dead Horses.

"I think I heard of that case," said the young man. "It was very sad."

"Quite so," agreed the Major. "That poor fellow worked like a nailer, with the perspiration pouring down his brow, from early morn till dewy eve, from weary week to weary week, all Summer long, with no hope of reward for his honest toil only the galling consciousness that he was putting in his hardest licks for a mass of admixed fecundation."

"But," urged the young man, "credit is the soul and impetus of enterprise. If there were no borrowers, there would be no use for the capital accumulated in your bank. Credit levels mountains, chains the lightning, harnesses cataracts, builds cities and founds empires."

"Which do you want to do?" asked the Major.

"I want to put an interest in a Wash lenten hand press and a few fonts of type," said the young man.

"Better make a cabinet," advised the Major, "and you can have a Morris chair that isn't all in your eye and we'll talk terms. If you invest any money in it, carefully or a good indorsement, either, eh? You have a family, have you? And close the door after you, son, will you?"

The young man feared that it isn't worth while pointing out.

The Vanity Box

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

SIR IAN and Lady Hereward, while visiting their neighbors, Mrs. Fox ostler, learn accidentally of the romance in England of Teresina Ricardo, a beautiful young girl, with whom Sir Ian was infatuated while in India, prior to his marriage.

"She has decided to pay you a surprise visit this very day," says Mrs. Forestier.

Sir Ian and his wife become guests at twelve Miss Ricardo, but Lady Hereward sends him word that they cannot stay, owing to Prince Mout, explaining that she has some souvenirs to distribute among some of her friends.

Sir Ian meets Miss Ricardo, whom he has not seen for years. She notices that he seems distressed. She explains that she is visiting her cousins and that she takes away, and felt compelled to visit them. Sir Ian and his wife become companions to former years.

Miss Verney, a daughter of the late vicar, enters just then and both notice that Sir Ian is both startled and pleased. Ricardo remarks on the prolonged absence of Lady Hereward, and Sir Ian asks Miss Verney if she saw her lady during her visit in the kitchen. She seems more agitated than ever and abruptly leaves the room, explaining that she has to help the cook superintend the dinner.

Mrs. Barnard, wife of Tom Barnard, formerly a footman for Hereward, is attending to her household duties with little interest, as she is expecting a visit from her friend Miss Craigie, Lady Hereward's maid. Miss Craigie arrives at Tom Barnard's lodge. Tom Barnard, who was a soldier under Colonel Hereward and Sir Ian, and old chitterlin, is away at the village. The two Craigie is left alone with Edward, a footman, and Mrs. Barnard chafts her about it.

Miss Craigie has succeeded Liane, a French maid, who has mysteriously disappeared. She tells Mrs. Barnard that Lady Hereward suspects Mr. Barnard of having had several nights with Sir Ian, but something to do with the girl's disappearance. Miss Craigie is bitter toward Lady Hereward because she bewails the loss of Liane.

Mrs. Barnard tells Miss Craigie the history of Sir Ian's life. Lady Hereward, Sir Ian Hereward married an Italian opera singer, and was divorced by her without learning whether his first wife was alive or not, and Sir Ian married Lady Hereward girl. Ian Barr was born to them. The boy inherits the name of Barr when he learned that his father's first wife was named Barr. Sir Ian married Lady Hereward Ian Barr learned of his father's divorce, and was cast off by the will, everything being left to Sir Ian Hereward. Sir Ian tried to get Ian Barr to accept the fortune, but the latter refused. He was subsequently persuaded to take the place of steward on the estate.

Mrs. Barnard repeats her suspicion that Ian Barr was in love with the maid, Liane, but that Miss Verney was in love with Ian Barr. She tells Miss Craigie to make up her mind with Edward, the footman, and while they are speaking they hear two shots in the woods. Mrs. Barnard believes the shots are keepers killing rabbits.

Miss Craigie goes, and shortly afterward Sir Ian appears and asks for Tom. She finds a white and he cries that his wife has been killed. When Tom comes they go to the lower together.

THE door leading into the ground-floor room of the Tower was open, though it was supposed to be locked always, as Tom Barnard well knew. He went into the small, square room, close on Sir Ian's heels, and saw Lady Hereward lying along the floor at her back. She lay so there, as they entered, the top of her head was turned toward them; and they saw her face, as it were, upside down. An expression of agony and despair seemed to be carved upon the stony features, and more terrible was it to see, that Harard's throat was cut. Sir Ian made no sound, but a slight shudder convulsed his muscles.

There was blood on the floor and on her delicate gray dress, a little, too, on her soft brown hair, which was scarcely disarranged, but gone on the marble-white face. Her eyes were wide open, and raised, as if she had died looking at something above her head, and gazing down into them it was as if they stared up with an expression of anguish straight into Tom Barnard's.

Involuntarily he started back, but controlled himself directly. At first, he saw no wound; then, a second look showed a horrible mark low down in the side of the throat, from which blood had poured, but had now ceased to flow.

"Shot," Sir Ian echoed.

"My God, sir, who could have done it?"

"Who, indeed!" the other echoed again. "You found her like this?"

"Yes, sir," Barnard said. "She was almost on her face. I—turned her over to see—to end out—if she were dead, or only—"

"Of course," Sir Ian said, quietly, what an unbelievable thing! I don't believe it now. We shall wake up, sir. It must be some dream."

"Would to God it were," said Sir Ian. "I would die the same death she has died, a hundred times over, if I could bring her back to life. But I can't. That's the horror of it."

"It's enough to drive a man mad, sir," stammered Barnard. "But bear up. At least we'll have revenge on the brute who has done this thing."

"Revenge!" the other man repeated bitterly.

"Oh, I know that won't give her back to you, sir, but flesh and blood is flesh and blood, and it would be a satisfaction. What beast, what maniac is there vile enough to murder her ladyship, good to every one, loved by every one? It's beyond reason. It's the act of a monster. Why, sir!"—and Barnard stooped lower—"did you see—did you notice—her lady ship's rings are gone, the beautiful rings she always wore, and her brooch—"

"Yes, I—saw," Sir Ian answered, his voice breaking as if at the recollection of that first awful moment when he had seen—what there was to see.

"Then it was a robbery—"

"It looks like it."

"Some tramp—hiding here in the tower. The brute—the unspeakable brute! I hope to heaven they'll catch him. I wish I—"

The muffled sound of feet on the carpet of pine-needles outside broke short Tom's sentence. The doctor had arrived at the same time with a superintendent of police and a constable.

At the Ricardos'.

Teresina Ricardo and her cousin's wife did not see each other after Terry came back from Friars' Moat to White Fields, until they met in the drawing room just before dinner. Maud had been lying down trying to sleep off a headache, when her visitor returned; and Terry, after inquiring for Mrs. Ricardo's health, had gone straight to her room. Thus she had had more than two hours and a half to herself, when precisely at 8 o'clock she descended the stairs to the drawing room. She knew that Mrs. Ricardo was already there, for a message to that effect had just been sent her.

Terry was glad that Maud was so much better; nevertheless, instead of hurrying down to give the news of the afternoon, she kept her room till the last minute. Dinner was at 8; and if Maud's were a punctual household, there would be no time for any private talk before the two men got into the dining room, and he waited upon by several discreet-looking but sharp-eared footmen.

As it happened, however, it was not a punctual household. Norman Ricardo, a captain in the Navy, was away at present in command of his ship, when on leave enjoyed the luxury of being late for everything. Maud, an American, and a native of New Orleans, was always behind hand on principle. People who knew her invited Mrs. Ricardo to come to their houses at least twenty minutes before they wanted her, by which means she often arrived not more than half an hour late. Such habits did not make for punctuality in kitchen and servants' hall. As the cook was well aware that eight o'clock meant half-past at White Fields, she arranged matters accordingly, to suit herself; and though Terry, on this occasion, did not spend it out yet, Mrs. Ricardo's guests, if prompt in assembling for meals, were quite accustomed to converse among themselves in the drawing room for long before their hostess appeared.

For a great wonder, however, Maud had dashed down to-night at five minutes to eight, and had sent to ask if Terry were ready. She pretended to think that dinner would be announced soon, but as a matter of fact, the two ladies were likely to have half an hour together before being summoned to the dining room, as the cook had not counted on this promptness.

"You might as well sit down, Terry," Maud said, when Miss Ricardo came in and trailed her white India muslin to an easy chair. "It may be three or four minutes yet before dinner; and you must be tired."

"I'm not tired," Terry smiled. "Besides, if I had been, I've lost all time for that. How good that you've got over your headache, dear!"

A Modern Frankenstein

A Fable with a Moral to It That Parents Would Do Well to Dwell Upon.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

ONCE upon a time, and that time was not in the past, but in the future, it being the privilege of those who will fatten tomorrow as well as with yesterday, a hard-working man and his wife—who worked equally hard—were awakened by the sharp sting of a whip across their shoulders.

"Get up," said a child's voice, "and wait on me."

They opened their eyes in amazement and saw standing by their bed their Child with a horsewhip in its hand, and scorn and fury in its eyes.

"Get up, I say," the Child repeated. "You" (to the father) "hurry off to earn money for me, and you" (to the mother) "cook my breakfast and bring it to me in bed."

They obeyed without protest, each realizing at once that by gratifying every whim of the Child all its life and making themselves its slave, they had roused the wind, and were now reaping the whirlwind.

In the days and nights and weeks and months and years that followed, each became more and more of a slave to the Child, and when they looked around they saw that in other homes conditions were the same, for in every home the Child's foot was on its parents' necks, and in every home fathers and mothers had become mere machines for grinding out pleasures and privileges for the Child, none of which were good for it.

A sad day of slavery had come.

THERE is a theory that fairy tales are not wise reading for children; that they stimulate an unhealthful imagination and clutter the brain with the images of things that do not exist. This may be true, but this fairy tale is not for the children, but for the parents, and the Moral is told in the tale.

In these modern times fathers and mothers have a way of declaring that they intend to "Do more" for their children than was done for them, and they do less; by "doing more" they mean that they will be more indulgent; that their children will have all the luxuries of frills and sweets that were denied them; that their children will never have to work as they had to work.

They were raised outdoors like hardy plants, and learned to fight and conquer adverse weather; they are making little hothouse plants of their children by shielding and coddling them from every blast.

They indulge them and pamper them and spoil them; they give them all the rich food they crave because they love them; they spoil their stomachs and dispositions alike in the name of parental love, and they load their little bodies with fine raiment and fill their little heads no more than with nonsense about the nobility of fine clothes.

They grow up with a scorn of the child who has one ruffle or one ribbon less, and have a contempt beyond words for a child of the poor. Little knowing in their narrow, hide-bound brains that the future welfare of this great country depends upon the poor, that from its ranks there will come marching all the hopes for the future.

They measure life by a cut-glass standard, and with their mother's milk imbibe the notion that worth depends not on what one does, but upon what one wears. Good or bad conduct is gauged by the effect on clothes, and that which doesn't tear a coat is a pure act up to the ruffle in the conduct in this modern day measurement.

This passion for clothes makes them old before their time, and little girls who should be playing with dolls are dressing for the serious game of hearts. They paint, powder and wear false hair at fourteen, and at the same tender age have learned enough of the attractiveness of sex to wear a low shoe, a silk stocking and a very short skirt, all of which should make parents do a lot of serious thinking.

If the parents of to-day can look with pride on this product of indulgence, and boast that they "did more" for their children than their parents did for them, they are blind to reality. If their own parents were harsh in their commands and disciplined them, they learned then that, at least it cannot be said of them that they were a system created to make weaklings and peacocks of their offspring.

If this unrestricted indulgence in ruffles and soda water is a sign of the progress of civilization, a proof of greater mental development, then destruction awaits at the end.

KNOCH HIM REAL HARD WITH AN OAR, CLAUDE
LOTS OF STEEP TOYS TO BUNK INTO THE WINDOWS OF MESSRS. MAH
I'M MAN TO MAN NOW
CURSES!
HERSHFELD

With diabolical ingenuity Desperate Desmond plans a weird and lingering death for the hero, Claude. The victim is bound securely to a small boat, and this is tied to a runaway motor boat, which is turned loose down a creek which leads into the wildest part of the jungle, a part which no white man has ever seen. The hapless Rosamond is forced to view the departure of her lover.

Alone in the midst of a trackless jungle, Claude is towed along by the motor boat on its mad and aimless course. Terrible cries from the fierce denizens of the forest assail his ears, but he is unable to move a finger to protect himself. Terrified by wild beasts, he will surely perish of starvation in the inhospitable jungles, where only the fiercest beasts can exist.

As the motor boat swiftly dashes down the channel of the creek, Claude, bound as he is, perceives an island. Around it sweeps the unexplored water, and around it also sweeps the flying motor boat. A wish of relief breaks from the hero, for now, if the gasoline holds out, he will return directly to the open sea. There is always hope, and Claude brings back so black.

At the mouth of the creek, where Desperate Desmond had waited to gloat over the fate of his heroic rival, there is sudden panic as the uncontrolled and uncontrollable motor boat shoots forth like a runaway locomotive. It is too late for even Desmond to form a plan of escape, and crash! goes the motor boat into the villain's craft.

It is the work of a moment for Rosamond to retrieve her lover from his bonds, and together they quickly make a prisoner of Desmond. Thus virtue triumphs once more, as it ever does in the end, no matter how securely villainy may appear to be entrenched. What is now in store for the villain? A horrible death would be no more than his due, but the brave are ever generous.

So Claude gives Desmond a chance to settle their feud with the weapons that nature has equipped them with. On the boat they build up a ring and face each other to battle to a finish. "On the bay!" cries Desperate Desmond, as he prepares to take every advantage. It looks like an even duel, but the villain may be up to some tricks. Your ballerties, see tomorrow's paper.

Other Factors Besides Love in Happy Marriages

By FREDERICK TOWNSEND MARTIN

I ALWAYS feel when I am attending the wedding of a young couple who are going before the altar of God to swear love and devotion to each other that, as they stand there, looking so radiantly happy, they little realize the great battle of life that lies before them in the future, and how important it is that they should understand those holy vows which they are taking, and which call upon them to bear mutually that cross which comes to all people in this life.

I think that one of the great dangers with young people starting out to married life is that one sometimes pushes the cross too much upon the other, instead of mutually bearing the weight of it.

I should say, after living all these long years in the active world, that the happiest marriages are those that are based upon the foundation of mutual respect, one for the other, and of friendship, founded upon the rock of justice, one toward the other. An alliance thus formed will stand the stress of time. After having fought together for many years the strenuous battle of life, even though the romantic side of love may to some extent have vanished, the strength of their union remains based upon those foundations of mutual respect and friendship, and thus they are enabled to avoid those rocks which bring disaster, misery and woe to so many married couples in this world.

I hope that some of these young people who are starting out in life will read what I have written and will remember that these are the results of years of experience, during which I have seen many homes wrecked because the marriage contract was entered into without realizing that future happiness depended upon those foundations of mutual respect and friendship.

Would that it were possible for me to ensure the happiness of all couples entering into the holy state of matrimony, and that in reading these lines of soliloquy they would grasp them as containing truths which experience has taught me affords the solution of the problem of happiness in married life.

I will sum up this soliloquy by the following reflections:

Realize that the obligations of the marriage contract are mutual. The burdens must not be one-sided.

Toleration is the mother of happiness in married existence.

One of the greatest dangers in marriage, to be safeguarded against is contained in the precept that "Familiarity breeds contempt." When age has supplanted the beauty and fire of youth and dulled romance, the couple can still avoid the rocks of matrimony and hold on to their happiness by cultivating mutual respect, friendship, sympathy for each other's failings and appreciation of each other's good points. These are what make for a happy married life.

There is an old fable which affords the best example of what I mean: "The unyielding oak is shattered by the storm. The tender reeds, by yielding to the force of the elements, escape!" So with marriage, a policy of give and take must be followed.

The thought should also be remembered that, while marriages may be made in heaven, they have to be lived out on earth.

DANGEROUSLY PRECOCIOUS.

"Mamma, here's a word I don't understand. What does 'oleginous' mean?"

"Let me look at it, Bobby. What, that isn't 'oleginous'; that is 'oleaginous.' It means oily, smooth."

"No wonder my tongue slipped on it"

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAH MARTIN.

Mrs. C. A.: You are ruining your hair using soap for shampoo purposes. The alkali dries out the scalp and causes dandruff, and dull, lifeless, stringy hair. For your case, I know of nothing better than a little cauthera shampoo. This makes an abundance of rich, penetrating lather that thoroughly cleanses and invigorates. You will find on using this that the hair dries evenly and quickly and takes on a rich gloss and softness. You can get cauthera at the drug store, and a teaspoonful dissolved in a cup of hot water is enough for a good shampoo.

Eva: It is distressing to have a shiny, muddy skin, but that can be corrected if you dissolve four ounces spermaceti in one-half pint hot water and add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. When cold apply to the skin and rub lightly until dry. A few times using cleanses the skin of impurities and banishes freckles and tan. You will find this better than powder, as it is invisible on and does not rub off or spot from perspiration.

Nell: Don't worry about the fuzz on your chin. To rid the skin of the objectionable growth get a box of delatone at the drug store and with water mix enough into a paste and apply to hairy surface and after two or three minutes rub off and wash the skin carefully. While delatone costs a dollar an ounce, it seldom does require a second application to completely remove superfluous hairs.

M.: Expressive eyes never lack in brilliancy, yet to keep them so, it is necessary to give them proper care and attention. Whenever your eyes ache or grow tired, use an eye-tonic, made by dissolving an ounce of cystos in a pint of cold water. A few drops in each eye twice daily quickly relieves the smart or ache and tends to strengthening the eyes, gives to them a remarkable brilliancy and sparkle.

Ada G.: Your dull, streaky hair can be made bright and rich in shade if you make up and use this excellent hair and scalp tonic: To a half-pint alcohol add a half-pint water, then pour in one ounce spirits nitre. Massage a little into the scalp two or three times in a half-pint while and you will find dandruff or oiliness disappears and the hair will grow long and silky and be easy to do up.

Maude R.: If you want health and strength you must keep the blood free of poisonous accumulations, and unless you attend to this immediately constipation may follow. Make up and take this tonic: Dissolve an ounce karlesa in a half-pint alcohol, then stir in one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a full pint. Taking a tablespoonful of this mixture before meals rids the system of poisons, rebuilds waste tissue and makes you well and strong. You will find this karlesa tonic splendid for clearing the skin of pimples and sallowness.

Mary: Large pores can be reduced and the skin cleared of local impurities if you use my almocoin cream-jelly. This is inexpensive and should be on every woman's toilet table. To a half-pint cold water add one ounce almocoin and two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let stand several hours before using. Used freely, it works wonders with the skin, and no matter how sallow or unnatural it may have been, after a short while the skin grows soft and beautiful. Wrinkles and fine lines vanish as if by magic and hollows soon round out when every almocoin cream-jelly is used.

Madge: It is an easy matter to regain your former weight without dieting or indulging in violent exercise if you employ the parnotis treatment, which is inexpensive and easy to prepare. Get four ounces parnotis and dissolve in a pint and a half of hot water. Strain when cool and take a tablespoonful before meals. Parnotis is quite harmless and its use will gradually dissolve the fat and give you your youthful figure without leaving the skin wrinkled or flabby.

The Gun Runner

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

GUSTAV LINGG, wireless operator on the Lamulian, goes ashore while his ship is loading at her New York dock and loses his way in a dense fog which comes in from the harbor and envelopes the city. On a side street he meets a beautiful girl whom he has never seen before, but who calls him by name. "I want to talk to you," she says. "I must talk to you alone."

Overcome by slyness, he starts bookishly at her for a moment and then turns and flees. He goes a long way and finally, just as a fury whistles into him that he is nearing the river, he enters a narrow street, only to find his way blocked by a cab, a cab with an open door.

In the cab sits the woman from whom he had fled. "I waited to warn you," she says, and pushes him into the cab.

"Of what?" he asks, as the cab starts.

"Not to sail on the Lamulian."

He asks why and she replies that it will not be safe. He apparently doubts her and she pleads with him. Finally she asks him to kiss her, and as he draws away from her, Gustav hears a cord about his neck. In the midst of his struggles, the cab stops, the door is open, and a man drags him into the street. A crowd gathers and a policeman appears, who begins clubbing his assailant. Then another man appears, who flings off the policeman and puts the dazed operator back into the cab, calling out to the driver:

"To the police station, straight!"

The man who had attacked the operator then tells the bewildered policeman that the man who has just driven off in the cab with Lingg is one of Wilkie's men and that the woman is also in the secret service.

The scene changes to the deck of the steamship Lamulian. A big shouldered man in a raincoat wants to send a message, but the operator tells him the wireless apparatus is out of order and that he can't do any sending until he gets to sea.

The captain calls to the operator to hurry up and get the apparatus in shape. Through the mist can be seen an approaching warship. The man in the raincoat paces the deck, now and then stopping to glance in at the wireless apparatus. He finally tips a couple of messages signed Michael Duffy.

"YOUR machine's working, isn't it?" he asked, preoccupied with the inspection of the end of his cigar. The cigar was soft and thick and short, like his own fingers.

"Despite its dark and baleful color, he kept inhaling and expelling great lungfuls of it as he talked. The operator idly registered the mental decision that cigars such as those were surely Honduran make.

"I saw you giving a message to the captain, didn't I?" And again the bellows-like lungs expelled their languid cloud.

"That was not to take on coffee at Puerto Lucolda," answered McKinnon. He delivered himself of this information casually, almost with amusement, though his half-averted eyes were not unconscious of the effect produced by what he had said.

The stranger was suddenly offering him one of the thick, short cigars. A shadow seemed to have lifted from his face.

"I don't smoke," said the ingracious man at last, seeming to draw back into his shell of reticence. "And I'm busy sending."

"You mean you're actually talking to New York now?" smilingly persisted the other. The operator's hand went out to the switch, block against the unpainted boards, and flanked on either side by a fuse.

"I've been tuning for Atlantic City. We're just picking him up," he answered as his fingers hovered over the starting box lever, clamped to the same pine boards above the switch.

A sudden deep buzzing filled the cabin. It grew louder and louder as the lever crossed farther and farther down on the contact-plate. It sounded like a hive of bees stirred into anger. The stranger peered in at the dynamo, under the operating table.

"So you're talking!" he murmured meditatively, appreciatively.

"How long will you be in communication with them?" he went on after a second or two of thought.

The other raised an earphone to listen, as the question was repeated. Then he turned back and bent over the carborundum between his responder-points.

Was Simply Busy

"We're never really out of touch with 'em, on this run," he retorted. He seemed to resent his own yielding concessions to the other's imperturbable good-nature.

"You mean you can call up New York from the Caribbean?"

The other set down his earphones and shook out his small cardboard box of carborundum fragments, picking through them for a fresh piece for his responder-points.

It seemed apparent enough, to the patient-eyed man across the cabin from him, that he was neither friendly nor unfriendly; it was simply that he was busy.

"No, I don't mean that, exactly. New York never works south of Atlantic City, as a rule. He's got too much to handle there, too many ships going in and out. But New York can relay to Galena and then down to NF—that's Norfolk—and then there on to Hatteras."

Then Hatteras could throw a message over to Charleston, and if we're depending on land stations alone, Charleston can relay to Savannah, and then Savannah can get in touch with the naval station at St. Augustine."

"And then where?" asked the stranger, leaning back against the cabin wall.

"Then Key West could catch up, and if there wasn't a gunboat or an Atlas fruit liner crawling somewhere around Cuba, why, the navy yard at Guantanamo could get it relayed over to Limon, and from Limon, in decent weather, you'd catch the navy yard operator at Colon. And if one night was clear you'd run one chance in a hundred of waking up the 'Cocoanut Trail on the Isthmus.'"

There was a moment or two of silence.

"Could Puerto Lucoulda get anything outside of a passing ship? Kingston' for instance?"

"Kingston never had wireless—it's prohibited by the British government."

"Then there's New Orleans, on a pinch."

"There's too much map between," explained the operator. He gathered up his box of scattered carborundum.

"Don't Use a Tape"

"Never had it, getting words on a tape that way, four hundred miles off," said the stranger. He scratched his huge head in a sort of mute astonishment, as he surveyed the cabful of apparatus.

"We don't use a tape," the other corrected, waving a preoccupied hand toward the inscription on the condenser case. "We're De Forest.' And we don't claim to talk around the world yet."

The stranger was peering contentedly and aimlessly about the crowded little cabin. "Where the devil d'you suppose that emitter was off to?" he next inquired.

"That's what I've been trying to find out."

"They all carry wireless?" asked the other as he noted the exhalation of pungent cigar smoke ceilingward.

"Yes; but they're not aching to talk just yet. They've been lying down there in the hold for three months. They'll be calling all night, just for the sake of seeing something doing with a coherer again. They'll listen to a coal log, just to pick up a scrap of outside news."

The stranger, who seemed well satisfied with what he had learned, remained silent for a moment or two.

"By the way, could you take a message for New Orleans to-night?"

"I could take it all night, if you're willing to prepay land charges."

"I'll pay anything you say, so long as you get me in touch with my people there. I want to ask Jean Carche, at the St Charles, just when a shipment of oil and mill shafting got out of that port."

"Wait a minute, then, until I get At lantic City again. You can be writing your message and I'll get the time check on it."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TELL YOUR PARENTS.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am fifteen years old and secretly engaged to a young man three years my senior. I have been meeting him in the evenings, but my mother has forbidden me to see him any more.

When I told him this, he said if I did not see him three times a week, he would do me bodily harm.

Now, Miss Fairfax, I do not love this man, but since he has told me that, I cannot think every much of him.

I know he is in earnest. What shall I do?

I have not told my parents yet. What shall I do?

WORRIED.

MY dear child, you are extremely young and cannot be capable of coping with such a serious situation.

Tell your parents at once what has happened, for you need the help of an older person.

When the young man realizes that he is dealing with another man, his attitude will greatly change.

Always confide in your parents, for they, more than anyone in the world, have your interest at heart and will see that no harm comes to you.

TO WIN HER LOVE BACK.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a young woman two years younger than I, called on her recently, and she behaved in a very cool manner.

I met her three months ago. She told me I might call on her. I have called twice a week, and lately she has given me the cold shoulder.

Do you think she is keeping company with some one else? If so, could you advise me how to win her back? I don't like to lose her.

THE next time you see her act as you did when you first knew her. Talk in a way that will hold her attention and interest her in you.

When you have gained a little ground, tell her you must leave. Stay a short time, and keep enough to make her wish to see you again.

I don't believe she is interested to another man. Some little thing has caused this indifference. Call upon her once each week or perhaps not so often.

Whenever you see her, plan things that will interest her.

Prepare yourself to the best advantage, for that you are going to succeed, and you will—if you deserve to succeed.

WE INVITE

EVERY THIN MAN AND WOMAN HERE

EVERY PERSON IN BOSTON AND VICINITY TO GET FAT AT OUR EXPENSE

This is an invitation that no thin man or woman can afford to ignore. We'll tell you frankly we are going to give you a wonderful discovery that helps digest the foods you eat—that puts good, solid flesh on people who are thin and underweight, no matter what the cause may be—that makes brain in live hours and blood in four—that puts the red corpuscles in the blood which every thin person is short of. How can we do this? We will tell you. Science has discovered a remarkable concentrated treatment which increases solid growth, the very substance of which our bodies are made—a treatment that makes indigestion and other stomach troubles disappear as if by magic and makes an end of dyspepsia for sufferers from weak nerves or lack of vitality feel like a 2-year-old. This new treatment, which has proved a boon to every thin person, is called Sargol. Don't forget the name—"S-A-R-G-O-L." Nothing like it has ever been produced before. It is a revelation to women who have never been able to appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness. It is a godsend to every man who is under weight or is lacking in nerve force or energy. If you want a beautiful and well-rounded figure of symmetrical proportions, of which you can feel justly proud—if you want a body full of fresh, long life and energy, go to the Sargol Company, 432-G Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., to-day and we will send you, absolutely free, a 50c box of Sargol that will prove all we claim. Take one with every meal, and in five minutes after you take the first concentrated tablet of this wonderful flesh builder you will commence to unfold its virtues, and it has by actual demonstration often increased the weight of the frail person a pound a day. That is what you may call proof! Well, here you are. Here is the opportunity of those who have tried—who have been convinced—and who will swear to the virtues of this marvelous preparation.

REV. GEORGE W. DAVIS says:

"I have made a faithful trial of the Sargol treatment and must say it has done me a world of good. I have gained 12 pounds in 10 days and now weigh 170 pounds, and, what is more, I feel like a new man. I am a well man. It has been the turning point of my life. My health is now fine. I don't take to take any medicine at all and never want to again."

MRS. A. T. ROODENRISER writes:

"I have gained immensely since I took Sargol. I now weigh 140 pounds, which is 15 more than I ever weighed before. I feel stronger and am looking better than ever before. I recommend Sargol to all thin women, as it has done wonders for me. I have got to look so well and weigh so much."

CLAYS JOHNSON says:

"Please send me another ten-day treatment. I have gained 10 pounds in weight and feel the best I ever felt in my life. I am getting back to my old weight, which is 160 pounds, and I was down to 140 pounds when I started in with Sargol. Now, I weigh 160 pounds, and I am feeling fine. Every morning that I used to feel all run down and tired I now feel like a new man. I have gained 20 pounds of flesh and that in a short time."

F. GAGNON writes:

"I have to report after taking the Sargol treatment for 30 days that I have gained 20 pounds in weight. I was under weight when I started in and now I weigh 160 pounds. I have gained 25 pounds with 25 days treatment. I cannot say enough in favor of Sargol. My friends are getting on flesh. My face has a fine color and I am feeling fine. I will be glad to tell any one the pounds of flesh and that I have gained."

MRS. VERNIE ROUSE says:

"I have begun to use the Sargol treatment. I read and, as it has helped me greatly, I am willing to tell what I think of it. I am up three days out of a week, with scarcely any pain. I have gained 10 pounds in weight and feel fine. I am getting my weight and color back. I am glad I ever heard of Sargol. It is the best medicine I have ever used. I have for five years. I can now say that I am entirely well. I have recommended Sargol to a few friends and they, too, have found it to do just as I have."

You may know some of these people or know somebody who knows them. We will send you their full address if you wish, so that you can find out all about Sargol and the wonders it has wrought.

Probably you are now thinking of some other time and some other place. Write us at once and we will send you, absolutely free, a full package of the most wonderful tablets you have ever seen. No matter what the cause of your thinness is, Sargol makes thin folks fat, but we don't ask you to take our word for it. Simply cut the coupon below and inclose 10c in stamps to help cover the distribution expenses and your Sam's mail will bring you by return mail absolutely free a full package of this wonderful package you ever received.

COME, EAT WITH US AT OUR EXPENSE.

This coupon entitles any thin person to one 50c package of Sargol, the concentrated flesh Builder (provided you have never tried it), and that 10c is inclosed to cover postage, packing, etc. Read our advertisement printed above, and then put 10c in stamps in letter to-day, with this coupon, and the full 50c package will be sent to you by return mail. Address: The Sargol Company, 432-G, Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y. Be sure to inclose 10c in stamps to help cover postage, packing, etc. Write your name and address plainly, and FIN THIS COUPON TO YOUR LETTER.

Some kinds of cotth are at the lowest prices ruling in this generation. The large cotton crop of this year is proving a source of real worry to the bankers, who fear that, even though a greater number of bales are exported, less money will come into the country for cotton than came in the fiscal year just closed.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS A GAIN

NEW YORK, July 18.—Pronounced strength and activity were shown by a number of issues at the opening of the stock market to-day, while the list generally showed gains over yesterday's final quotations.

Canadian Pacific established a new high record in the early selling, up to 241½, against 242¾ at yesterday's close. Interborough Metropolitan was also rather strong in the opening, the issue going to 53¾.

People's Gas was the notable exception to the general upward trend, declining one point. Practically all of the leading railroad and industrial issues showed gains in the early transactions. Among the opening advances were: Reading common, 3; Amalgamated Copper, 1; Southern Pacific, ¾; Southern Railway, ½; Union Pacific, ¾; B. R. T., 1; R. & O., 1; Anaconda, ¾.

The gold market opened firm with Standard Oil quoted at 656, but 605 asked, and American Tobacco 385 bid and 390 asked.

The American issues in London led a narrow but firm market. Canadian Pacific was strong on favorable earnings. Grand Trunk issues were moderately

Irving H. Page, president and treasurer of the Stevens-Duryea Automobile Company, announced his resignation of the presidency of that company yesterday. Mr. Page says his resignation is due to the need of rest from his more active duties, but he will remain treasurer and chairman of the board of directors.

W. H. Whitehead of Chicago has been mentioned as Mr. Page's probable successor, but nothing definite will be known until the meeting of the board of directors on July 29.

The efforts of the Touring Club of America toward improving the highway conditions in the principalities of the country have already achieved considerable success. Only recently a joint run of the Touring Club called the attention of Percy Hooker, chairman of the New York State Highway Commission, to several miles of road in the vicinity of Newburgh, despite along the customary touring route from New York to Albany. The road was so bad that motorists were compelled to make a side detour, but a recent inspection of the route by one of the Touring Club's official cars showed that substantial repairs had been made and the road is now in excellent condition.

As a result of an inquiry sent to the Touring Club to Chairman Harold Parker, of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, regarding complaints made by members about the poor road conditions in the western part of that State, Chairman Parker explained that the Commission is now working on many miles of road in that locality and has appropriated scores of thousands since May 1. The road through Tyngsboro from Great Barrington to the New York line states, is now well under way and will be completed before the end of the year, with the exception of the Alford section through Harrow's Corner, a part of the popular touring route in the north part of the State through Williamstown is being reconstructed. No work is being done on the road between Great Barrington and Ashley Falls.

J. H. MacAlman, local agent for the Stearns car, says: "The Knight engine used in the Stearns car is calling for a good deal of favorable comment. Many people think that the Stearns has only a two-cycle engine. There is absolutely no connection in any way, shape or manner between the Knight type and the two-cycle. The Knight is just the same as ordinary engines, so far as the cycles are concerned. Its advantage over them lies in its great power, silence, speed and flexibility. The Stearns Company is also guaranteeing 50 per cent. more power than can be obtained in an ordinary engine of equal size."

The ocean to ocean Premier cars which left Atlantic City on June 26, arrived in Omaha, 1,700 miles, on July 10. The thirteen cars which are participating in the run have had very little trouble, thanks to the Nobby Trend Tires furnished by the United States Tire Company, most of them still containing the original air they started with.

ICE COMPANIES TO BLAME FOR PRICES

NEW YORK, July 18.—From an investigation by Police Commissioner Bingham Lander Waldo, "it is apparent that the present high price of ice is largely due to the greed of the ice companies in refusing to take necessary measures to supply the city's wants." In reporting his findings to the Police Commissioner Waldo says that when the hot weather set in the largest ice dealers increased the price of ice from $2.25 to $3, and at one East Side dock there is now charged $4 for a ton. The advance was made, the commissioner says, in the face of a plentiful supply in storage.

WILD OPENING IN COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 18.—In a wild opening of the cotton market to-day initial prices came out from 25 to 29 points lower. Reports of rainfall in the South, due together with weak cables, had the bears unprepared with many new orders, and these were uncovered in large quantities. Long liquidation quickly followed, and the opening call was delayed for half an hour to regulate the volume of trade. Many of the offerings were taken by the bears immediately as soon after the call there was a rally of from 50 to 60 points. Prices declined upon were easy in the Liverpool market.

BOSTON MAN AT HEAD OF NEW YORK HOTEL

NEW YORK, July 18.—Allen Ainslie, president of the Lenox Hotel Company of Boston, has accepted the post of managing director of the Hotel Majestic, Seventy-second street and Central Park west. Mr. Ainslie has been in Majestic during the years 1898-9. The choice of Mr. Ainslie as managing director of the Majestic will bring into the management of both of which he is interested the Hotel Lenox of Boston, the Hotel Nassau at Long Beach and the new Hotel Taft at New Haven.

MINSTRELS AT KEITH'S FEATURE ATTRACTION OF SUMMER SHOWS

The combination of cooler weather and an exceedingly spicy and varied program sent away a large and happy audience from Keith's Theatre last night. A number of new acts delighted those who had come for an evening of unadulterated fun.

The main feature of the program, note-worthy not only for its originality, but for its unusual calibre, was the combination into one act of the already famous Melrose singers," who for several weeks past have been delighting summer audiences with a big chorus of "black-face" singers and four famous "end men, George Chatelier of Chatelier, Demarest and Weed's minstrels; Lew Kendall of Dupree and Kendall's company, Hughey Dougherty, the well-known comedian, and John Healy, lately with Al. Field's minstrels. In addition, Harry M. Morse, formerly with Cohan, Harris and Dockstader's shows, acted the part of interlocutor.

Imagine a combination like that! A mixture of mellifluous melody, mixed with all varieties of humor, jokes new and old succeeding one another with great rapidity. There were fifty in the cast, and when the curtain rose the Minstrelsies were in their white faces, were grouped on elevated platforms, with the interlocutor in the centre, while above them came the lines of the "black chorus."

The songs were, as usual, much appreciated. Dougherty gave a humorously tender rendering of "Evaline." Thatcher pathetically pleaded for "Watermelon on My Grave," while Benedict warbled his "Little Bird" after the manner of a nightingale. In addition, Messrs. Cole, Clapp and Steele gave solos, and Boyd and Preston were well received in a clarionet duet.

One of the sprightliest and most graceful acts seen for some time was the acrobatic performance of Ergotti, assisted by Miss Gray, agile "acrobatess," who went through feats of skill and daring with so much ease that their most difficult turns were made to appear simple.

Ida Clayton, ably supported by Messrs. Moreyan Lewis and Griffin, appeared in a sketch entitled "Little Miss Fresh" or "A Child Shall Lead them," proving that she had dual capabilities of both author and actress. She showed herself to be equally effective in both capacities, and in portraying her lines with remarkable cleverness. Clemons and Dean excelled in songs and dances, their steps being gracefully and artistically executed.

"Longology" as presented by the two attractive Clark sisters and Billy Farnum held the audience, and Howard, "Scotch violinist," manipulated two dummies with such skill, drawing the most remarkable succession of sounds from them, that the audience was alternately convulsed and mutely fascinated. Mr. Grady's motion pictures were above the average.

The Castle Square

"My Friend from India" dropped in at the Castle Square last night and will be with us for a brief stay. We had a visit during the Winter, but at that time "My Friend" was travelling incog. "Katie Did," which had a successful run at the Boston Theatre, was modestly clothed in an alias which was presented here last night. "Katie Did" is simply a musical version of the other play.

Whatever its antecedents, "My Friend from India" is worth seeing. It is a conglomeration of comedy, and is somewhat along the style of the old classic "Charley's Aunt." A father is thrown through a combination of circumstances into a wealthy household, where a mistake as to his identity leads him to believe that he is an Indian philosopher. The confusion continues till the bubble bursts.

The scene that is called the funniest in the play comes in the second act. It is called the mirror scene, and is one of the newest and most original stunts.

William Carleton had the leading role as Charles Underhill, but Donald Meek in the impersonation of the barber, Mr. A. Keene Richards, and the real lead character, Miss Middlemas, the Harvard man who has recently joined the company, contributed something worth while out of the character of Evans. Inflorgill, the Brazilian gentleman, Miss Binney and Miss Colburn among the women characters, were the stars.

Majestic Theatre

"The Boys of Company B," Rida Johnson Young's comedy in three acts, is experiencing a grand revival at the Majestic theatre this week, and judging from the enthusiastic welcome, Manager Morrison has made no mistake by including this lively bunch of boys in his summer list. The comedy depends almost entirely upon its clever dialogue and the number of amusing incidents. It is light, witty and unusually interesting.

The play is presented by the boys of Company B, a popular military organization, the captain of which, Tom Allen, is deeply in love with Eileen McLane, daughter of Major McLane, the battalion commander.

The major borrows money from Henry Stabler, a self-made millionaire. Mrs. McLane, with ardent social ambitions, does likewise and agrees to have her daughter Eileen marry Stabler's son. Finally Eileen bombs everybody.

Tom Allen, the role originally played by Arnold Daly and later by John Barrymore, is played by Wilton Metcalf, who makes of the character a likeable person with lots of snap and ginger. Eleanor Gordon in the conventional role of Eileen is very good. Her total indifference to the presence of Stabler and the fit of temper she displays upon discovering Tony Kennedy flirting with Madge Blake are gems of acting. Mrs. Hibbard is unusually good in the role of Mrs. McLane and Rockliffe Fellowes makes Arthur Stabler unbearably fresh and impudent in the comedy role is getting many laughs as the "girl with the lisp."

Creatore and His Band.

An enthusiastic welcome was given Creatore and his band last night at the opening of his engagement at the Huntington avenue baseball grounds. From the applause one might have easily imagined that Tony Pryor had just eulogized the ball over the fence for a home run. Each of the eight selections was received with prolonged applause.

Creatore was at his best. His instrumentation is model. He employs trumpets instead of cornets. He adds two English horns to mellow the bass. His quintet of saxophones constantly corrected for euphony. The wood-wind section is exceedingly well manned. The clarionets in unison displayed an admirable precision and fleetness in the rapid finale of the Tell overture.

The conductor was generous as ever with his encores. The popular selections he used as extras received enthusiastic appreciation.

The concerts continue every evening and there is a change of program each night. Boston in its enthusiasm for open air band concerts is following in the footsteps of Chicago, where every night there are concerts in a half dozen parks by leading bands.

Globe Theatre.

There was more than ordinary interest in the new bill at the Globe Theatre yesterday, because of the Edison picture, "The Minute Men," which was taken at Lexington and Concord about two months ago. The patriotic story that is told by the picture made a deep impression on yesterday's audiences. In the vaudeville part of the programme were The Royal Five, Harry La Marr, Riley and Hart and Darmondy, a juggler of astonishing skill.

Hub Theatre.

Tom Levene's miniature musical comedy company headed the new bill at the Hub Theatre yesterday. It supplied a lively entertainment.

Scenic Temple.

The new programme at the Scenic Temple yesterday was made up of vaudeville novelties that were new to Boston, and a long list of motion pictures.

Bass Point.

As the season advances Bass Point and Nahant increase their popularity, and the regular boats of the Nahant line are crowded with passengers. Who knew that nowhere on the Atlantic coast can better shore dinners be found than at the opening of the new recreation pier at Revere Beach the trip from there to Bass Point has become a favorite pastime with persons trying to escape the heat of the city.

Norumbega Park.

The Albanians Troubadours supplied the entertainment in the open air theatre at Norumbega Park yesterday, and the unusual signs are deserving they will prove one of the most popular attractions of the season. Not a little of the charm at Norumbega Park is due to the splendid new restaurant, to which has been added a Grape Arbor cafe.

Paragon Park.

Manager Dodge is finding the season at Paragon Park more than successful, and the enlarged bathing facilities are those that provides for the increased business that has been forced upon this popular place. Among the attractions at the Park none is more popular than the seals in the lagoon.

Orpheum Theatre.

Billy K. Wells, in a monologue that was slightly amusing was at the head of the new programme at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday afternoon. Besides Wells, Lew Hoson, a juggler; the Stage Struck Kids, Hartman and Beltrah, Miss Vanity Fair, Nora and Jarvis, De Haven and Whitney and Lupeta Peren, all of whom contributed in having the show one of the best of the Summer.

Provincetown Trips.

The steamer Dorothy Bradford, which makes daily trips to Provincetown, is taking big numbers of passengers on her regular old place. No trip out of Boston offers more enjoyment or is more popular than the sail across the bay in the Dorothy Bradford, with its commodious accommodations of the battleship fleet off Provincetown it gives an unrivalled view of the big fighting machines.

Next Week's Plays.

"On the Quiet" will be John Craig's attraction at the Castle Square for one week, beginning next Monday.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which, manipulated two dummies never before seen in stock, will be presented by the Stevens-Murray Morison company at the Majestic Theatre next week.

Gloucester Trips.

No water trip out of Boston offers more in the way of real enjoyment than the sail across the North Shore on the steamer Boston. Although the trip covers but a few hours it gives passengers a touch of deep sea sailing.

Satellite Trips.

The steamer Satellite makes daily trips to the fishing grounds and reports from passengers are always enthusiastic.

King Philip Trips.

The fishing is always good on the trips of the steamer King Philip, which also provides a day's lively outing.

Austin & Stone's.

The last week of the season at Austin & Stone's Museum opened yesterday with a large crowd present to see the curiosities, and the show in the theatre.

City of Boston.

PROPOSALS FOR THE RAISING AND RE-MOVAL OF THE OLD COURT HOUSE BUILDING.

Sealed proposals will be received at Room 60, City Hall, Boston, Massachusetts, inviting proposals for the raising and removal of the Old Court House Building, Court st., Boston, according to specifications which may be seen at the office of the Superintendent, and giving a bond with a surety company approved by the City Auditor, in the sum of $5,000, for the faithful performance of the contract. The proposals must state the time when work will be completed; also the price for which the building will be sold, if desired to include the raising and removal of the building, and the price for raising the second to the same with the exception of the solid front stone work, and the price for removing the second story only. Plans and specifications of the work may be obtained at the office of the Superintendent of Public Buildings, Room 60, City Court House, Boston, filed out, signed by the bidder, and left at said office on or before noon of Monday, August 4, 1911, at said office, with a certified check for $100 inclosed, which will be returned to the bidder if his proposal is not accepted, but will be retained by the City if his proposal is accepted and he refuses to enter into a contract. Proposals must be inclosed in envelope properly sealed and marked "Proposals for Raising and Removal of the Old Court House Building." The proposal must be made on the blank form which may be had on application at the office of the Superintendent of Public Buildings, Room 60, City Hall, Boston. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids. The undersigned reserves the right to reject any proposal if, in his opinion, the price offered is not for more than he considers the property is worth. Woman's Service to the State

Why Talk About Small Things, When Her Real Service Consists IN CREATING THE ENTIRE STATE?

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

It is a good sign when men show that they are afraid of the woman's rights movement. Until men become AFRAID of a thing that thing isn't very important. It was just after they became afraid of the abolitionist movement that the slaves were freed.

So it was a good sign when the bosses of the Chicago Independence Day celebration and parade would not permit women to take advantage of the occasion to advocate votes for women.

Women, however, are ingenious, and they managed, in spite of the limitations placed upon them, to remind the gay Chicago crowd of the fact that men have not done ALL the work of the world.

The float which the women of Chicago contributed to the parade was the most successful and altogether the most interesting in the whole day's show.

It was a float representing "Woman's Service to the State."

The women selected to prove that men do not do all the work were fairly well chosen.

There was Queen Isabella, who had the intelligence and the courage to help Columbus come over here and discover this land. If it had not been for her, and for her confessor, who had brains enough to believe that the world was round, and urged the Queen to help Columbus, the discovery might have been much delayed.

Then there was Joan of Arc, the wonderful peasant girl who had that womanly faith in herself and in mankind that has done so much to save men from their own cowardice. She is the woman that helped a worthless king to drive the English out of France. Few men have been greater than Joan of Arc.

There was also Maria Theresa, not so very interesting, but a very determined old lady, who gave Frederick the Great trouble, and showed a great deal of intelligence in protecting her country against others by making cunning combinations. No more intelligence, however, than the ordinary woman shows in protecting her babies or the ordinary mother bird in protecting its young in the nest.

There was Florence Nightingale, one of the world's really great and beautiful women, and Harriet Beecher Stowe, who did more than John Brown to fill the human race with horror of slavery.

We should like to suggest to women in Chicago and elsewhere, however, that the real service that women render to the State, the real work that they do for the human race, and for the development of this planet of ours, does not consist in contributing here and there a very brilliant, or noble, or courageous woman.

It should be remembered in writing, in preparing floats and otherwise, that WOMAN HAS CREATED, AND STILL CREATES, THE HUMAN RACE. A woman created Lincoln. Another woman created Washington. Another woman created Edison.

Franklin, Jefferson, all the long lists of lawmakers, workers, fighters, inventors, orators, poets and others—EVERY ONE OF THEM WAS PRODUCED BY SOME WOMAN.

If you had been on the earth many years ago and had had a chance to see the Garden of Eden, with Adam and Eve walking around in that garden, having a very nice time and behaving themselves, you would have admired the garden, you would have admired Eve and admired Adam, but you would have made a profound bow, and you would have looked upward with especial reverence to the power that CREATED Adam and Eve—WOULDN'T YOU?

Very well, when you see this American nation, you ought to have respect for the women that create the nation, every baby girl, man, woman and boy in it. Make a bow to woman, for she is the creator.

Have a fine, motherly looking woman, holding in her hand a little manikin dressed up like Uncle Sam.

Above her head place a sign reading as follows: "I created this Uncle Sam; I gave him the courage that put the Stars and the Stripes on that flag. I reproduce him year after year and generation after generation, and the mean little thing won't even let me vote; won't even give me my share in making the laws that are to govern the other men and the other women that I have got to create in the future."

If people could realize that woman is the CREATIVE force, that men get everything that is in them from their mothers, there would be less nonsense talked against votes for women, there would be less delay in introducing into our lawmaking power THE MORAL HALF OF THE HUMAN RACE AND ITS INFLUENCE—WOMAN.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

FLEXIBLE TRAIN SCHEDULES

Editor AMERICAN:

They do not have so many railroad wrecks abroad as in the United States. Why? Because the roads are more closely supervised by the governments. English trains are notoriously slow as compared with our American expresses. I understand they have more flexible schedules.

Here an engineer is compelled to make up "lost time"—the company doesn't tell him how to do the impossible, risky thing—and so the engineer speeds over switches and dangerous trackage. It is O. K. when he brings the train in safely and O. K. when he ditches it and kills himself and scores of passengers.

Can no government restrictions be placed on our mad craze for "getting there" no matter what the cost? Time is no part of eternity, and yet we hesitate to take all we need of it. Railroad managers, too, are only human. I suggest to the Interstate Commerce Commission now investigating the Bridgeport wreck that it investigate fully the engineers' side of the question, and determine how to prevent such men from being driven to death and taking innocent hundreds with them.

Let us have more flexible schedules and a lot of late trains if it will save human life.

Canton, Mass. J. F. PHILLIPS.

HUMANE BOSTON FIREMEN

Editor AMERICAN:

While walking through the West End the last day recently my attention was attracted by the large crowd gathered in front of Engine 4 on Bulfinch street, while the firemen were spraying water on the sweating horses with the hose, to the great delight of both drivers and horses. The patience and intelligence shown by some of the horses thus treated was worth witnessing, and the teamsters were very profuse in their thanks for the good work accomplished.

I learned later that Acting Chief Swallow issued an order to all the company commanders in the fire houses in District 3 to have the hose ready for use in case passing horses showed signs of fatigue or distress and also for the use of the teamsters driving such horses.

Acting Chief Swallow has started a noble work which other chiefs may well be proud to follow, and he should be commended for such excellent forethought and judgment. HENRY I. LAZARUS.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

BOND BETWEEN CANADA AND "THE STATES."

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

THIS article is written on the shores of Lake Louise, 500 miles east of Vancouver, and reputed to be, on all accounts, the finest spot in the Canadian Rockies, combining as it does the always varying complexion of the quietness and gentleness of the most charming of lakes with the grandeur and preciousness of overhanging snow mountains.

Konigsee, in Austria, is the only inland sea we have visited that seems to us to vie in beauty with Lake Louise, and even that lacks those elements of immensity that are here so abundantly present.

The only regret is that it is on the north instead of on the south side of the Canadian line, and yet we have natural attractions enough in our own country not to be envious of those existing outside, and, besides that, Canada, and the United States come so near to being identical that what belongs to one seems almost to belong to the other.

Notwithstanding the unswerving loyalty of the Canadians to the British Crown, there exists between them and us a community of feeling that easily leads us to forget that they and we are not one people.

A Boundary Line That Fails to Sever Two Peoples

This is not due to the fact that we are neighbors with only a boundary line that has only length and not breadth or thickness between us. For such closeness of contact would more easily make us enemies than friends.

This international fellowship and sense of common interest as between the two countries is explicable from two causes: Their loyalty to the British Crown exists rather as a sentiment than as a motive, determining their conduct or their practical relations either to England or any other Power. The Dominion is possessed of an exceedingly distinct national consciousness. It has ceased, in fact, to be an appurtenance of Great Britain.

While there has never been the abrupt break between the two that has unfortunately been the case in the history of our own American colonies, yet there is almost the same degree of severance as between Great Britain and the United States. In our own case the separation was a violent one, leaving an unpleasant memory behind, while in the instance of Canada the separation is as complete, with the exception of some little formality of union, but has developed in a quiet and natural way that gives occasion to no unpleasant reminiscence.

It is a remark which Canadians are constantly making to us that they are practically just as independent of the British Crown as we are, and yet they love that Crown in a way impossible for us, and flock to the coronation of the new King and are prepared to contribute to the military and naval equipment of the old country whenever circumstances may require.

Another fact that accounts for the congeniality existing between the peoples living on the opposite sides of the Canadian line is the large influx of enterprising people from the United States, which is bound everywhere and always to exert a leavening and a dominating influence upon populations that are more inert.

It is beyond question that our own qualities of character will more and more impress themselves upon Canadian life and enterprise, and that the restraints of British conservatism will be increasingly replaced by the impulsive constraints of American progressivism.

I should like to remark, by way of parenthesis, that it is unfortunate that we have not a specific name to apply to the inhabitants of the United States. "Americans" is too broad, for people living in Canada and in Mexico are as much Americans as we are. But those living in Mexico we call Mexicans, those living in Canada we call Canadians, but have no terms that is similarly specific to apply to those living in our own part of America. And to call them "people of the United States" is too complex a way of expressing a fact that is simple.

As an example of the way in which Canadian towns are increasing in population, and very considerably because of migration from the States, we might cite the case of Winnipeg, which, in 1871 had a population of 100, but which now counts nearly 200,000.

How all of these considerations are going to influence and determine our international relations with them it is impossible to foretell, but the present move that is being taken in the direction of modified tariff relations is a step that, it is pleasant to believe, will lead to closer and closer mutual understandings to the advantage of both nations, but without any impairment of the national independence of either.

A few can touch the magic string,
And noisy fame is proud to win them:
Alas for those that never sing,
But die with all their music in them.
HOLMES.

He Writes About Kings and Things

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THARE was two fine English peopul up to our house last nite for dinner, there name was Mister & Missus Black-Whyte. They was very sorry that they hadent been abel to go over to the Coronashun. Pa was very sorry, too. He dident like them.

My word, sed the Englishman, Mister Black-Whyte, how I wish that I cud have been thare! How I wish that my wife had a bushel or so of preshus stones, & how I wish that I had a bushel or so pedigree. That being the case, we wud burn up the track, wuddent we, dearest?

I dont know, sed Missus Black-Whyte. You tould me wen we was wedded that would talk me to the Coronashun. Jest think, she sed to Pa & Ma & me, I didn't have a chanst in the wurld to be at the Coronashun ball. Jest think. I did not have a chanst to be thare to greet King George the Fifth as the Monarch of all the English possesshuns.

I dont think you missed much, sed Pa. They tell me that the Georges was jest fair to middling Kings. Our old college chum, Lord Byron, didn't seem to think a whole lot of George the Third. If I remember my Judgment Reviews rite, sed Pa, Lord Byron sed, in speeking of George the Third's burial, wen the King was enshrined in gold,

It seemed the mockery of Hel to fold
The rottenness of eighty yeers in gold.

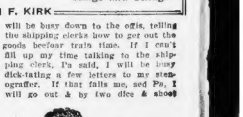
My word, sir, sed Mister Black-Whyte, I think that the Coronashun was one of the grandest vites that was ever pulled off. Who are you, may I ask, that can contradick me?

I am a American, sed Pa. Any time that we have got a king to crown I will be busy down to the offis, telling the shipping clerks how to get out the goods before train time. If I can't fill up my time talking to the shipping clerk, Pa sed, I will be using dick-tating a few letters to my stenogruffer. If that fails me, sed Pa, I will go out & by two dice & shoot craps with the offis boy. I am a bad booster for kings, Pa sed. If it come to choosing between cabbages & kings, give me the cauly-flowers.

Husband, sed Ma, you are spoiling our dinner. You shuddent speek so disrepectful of the English. Remember, Mister & Missus Black-Whyte is our frends. Remember that they are English. You must bear in mind, sed Ma, that the Coronashun is almost as old as the hills.



Maybe you are rite, sed Pa. Maybe I am jelius. You see, dearest, I can't forgit that noshel Coronashun of ourn wen I cum hoam shortly after our marriage & got crowned by a flat iron. You had been calling me your King that nite, too, sed Pa.

Then Ma dident say any moar.
